Abandons Effort to Let Federal Trade Body Conduct Quiz.

Won't Participate In Study Himself

Row on Floor Expected Over Inclusion of Bridges' Charges.

Bowing to intense pressure, both public and private, Senator George W. Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, yesterday introduced a resolution asking that a five-man Senate committee be appointed to investigate the Government agency he created—the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The snow-haired "father of TVA," who has fought for his idea for a score of years, abandoned his effort to get a Federal Trade Commission investigation of the TVA and served notice he does not intend to participate in a Senate investigation.

"Neither friends nor foes of TVA should investigate it," he said. "All I have sought, and all I still seek, is an impartial study of the entire matter."

Bridges Is Adamant.

But one foe of the TVA, Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, while expressing pleasure at Norris' "capitulation," refused to withdraw his name, and expressed a desire to be on the investigating committee.

Bridges and Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, are co-authors of a resolution demanding a Senate investigation. King signified yesterday he would not, in the interests of an impartial inquiry, insist on membership in the investigating group.

But Bridges insisted that the 23 charges made by King and himself be included in the Norris resolution. Norris declared flatly he would not assent to this, and there appeared to be prospects of a floor struggle when the resolution comes to a vote.

Calls Charges "Vindictive."

Norris declared that the 23 charges made by King and Bridges were "maliciously and vindictively worded."

Bridges and King, when first notified of Norris' action, said they were "delighted." They changed this statement later, with the demand that the 23 charges be inserted in the Norris resolution, when upon reading the latter, they discovered in it a long clause which also authorizes the investigating committee to study the actions of private utilities in the area in seeking to block the progress of TVA through injunction suits and other methods.

King said he was "dissatisfied" with the emphasis on private utilities.

House Seeks Part.

An investigation seemed certain, but House clamor for participation in the inquiry, which will be one of the most spectacular Washington shows this year, made possible its broadening into a joint Senate-House study.

Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, majority leader of the upper chamber, hinted he might seek an amendment to the Norris resolution to allow House participation.

It was still an open question whether the Senate will act today on the matter. Barkley, Norris and others prefer to delay action until after the President meets the three TVA directors on Friday at 11 a. m. for the second of his fact-finding conferences.

Policeman John W. Nally was arrested late yesterday and released on $1,500 bond pending grand jury action when a second coroner's jury—after deliberating seven and one-half hours—failed to agree whether he was to blame for the fatal shooting of Leroy Keys, colored mental patient.

United States Attorney David A. Pine then announced that the case would be presented to the grand jury at 10 a. m. today. Nally was taken in custody by Lieut. George Darnell, chief of the homicide squad, at the request of Roger Robb, assistant United States attorney, who examined witnesses at the coroner's hearing.

Accompanied by his father, Detective Sergt. Thomas Nally, the youthful policeman was taken to headquarters and booked on a technical charge of "Held for the grand jury." After posting his bond, Nally was released. Veteran observers at headquarters could not recall another case where a policeman has been forced to provide bail for his appearance.

The coroner's panel reported a deadlock shortly before 4 p. m.,

President Battles Like Commoner to Beat Tax Deadline

Together with plenty of other residents of Washington, President Roosevelt last night struggled with eleventh-hour desperation to complete his income tax return in time to make the deadline tonight at midnight.

White House aides said yesterday the President was prepared to devote his whole evening to figuring how much he owes the Old Man With the Whiskers on his $75,000 salary and whatever other income he had last year.

Meanwhile, more than 6,000 persons made their annual pilgrimage to the Internal Revenue Building here yesterday, officials reported.

The deputy collector's office will be open until midnight, it was announced.

Cardozo Recovering On Sixth Anniversary

On the sixth anniversary of his assuming office as associate justice of the Supreme Court, Benjamin N. Cardozo was reported yesterday to be recovering steadily from the illness which has kept him confined to his home at 2101 Connecticut avenue northwest for many weeks.

Physicians said that the justice, ill of shingles and a heart ailment, has been eating and sleeping well. They declined to predict when he would be able to resume his duties.

Fort Myers, Fla., March 14 (U.P.).—Al Lastinger, youth who left Tampa alone March 4 in an 18-foot sloop on a trip to Italy, was picked up today in the Gulf of Mexico, 65 miles off Fort Myers, and brought here for medical treatment.

Lastinger, unable to talk coherently and apparently victim of sunstroke and exposure, was rescued by Harry Offutt, of New York.

Vote Aligned To Kill Profit Tax in Senate

Flat Levy Preferred on Corporate Incomes, Capital Gains.

By Robert C. Albright.

A hostile Senate Finance Committee yesterday went to work on the House tax bill with two primary objectives—business relief and adequate revenue.

Chairman Pat Harrison last night apparently had the votes to completely eliminate the undivided profits tax and to substitute flat taxes on corporate income and capital gains. He proposed special relief for small business, based on actual size of corporations, rather than earning capacity.

Preliminary to thoroughgoing revision of the House bill, the committee at morning and afternoon closed sessions yesterday closely questioned tax experts of the Treasury and the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue.

The Treasury was called on to supply itemized estimates of revenue on all provisions of the House bill. Undersecretary of the Treasury Roswell Magill said the bill falls about $22,000,000 shy of the $5,330,000,000 revenue needed in the 1938-39 fiscal year.

Magill told reporters the Treasury, in its $5,330,000,000 estimate, "is counting on an improvement in business in the last half of this calendar year." He said earnings reflected in March income-tax returns "up to the present seem to be holding up to what was anticipated."

Committee Divided.

As the committee went to work, Senators appeared to be divided, 15 to 6, in favor of complete elimination of the undivided profits tax principle remaining in the House bill. This represented a gain of two votes for the opposition to the principle, since The Post polled the committee two weeks ago. Chairman Harrison announced for repeal of the principle last Saturday, and yesterday Senator Clyde L. Herring (Democrat), of Iowa, joined Harrison.

Declaring for special relief for "small business" in the strict sense of that term, the chairman told reporters the House bill had failed to distinguish between small companies and companies reporting small earnings.

The House bill exempts from the undivided profits tax formula companies earning less than $25,000.

Definition Held Vague.

"You can't tell the size of a company by its earnings," said Harrison yesterday. "Under the House bill, a $50,000,000 concern would be considered 'smal lbusiness' and receive special treatment if it earned less than $25,000."

He indicated the Senate committee may undertake to define small business, taking into consideration company capitalization and stock outstanding.

Committee revision of the income tax brackets also was a definite possibility. It was learned that the Treasury has been asked to supply estimates of posible revenue losses if some of the higher individual income surtax brackets were scaled down. Harrison already has sug-

Snow Parking Ban Ends on 50 Streets

More than 50 additional District streets will be available for overnight parking after midnight tonight.

The parking ban on these streets because of snow removal operations, if and when there was snow this winter, expires at midnight.

Avenue Bridge Kept in Bill; Library Fund to Be Restored.

By James D. Secrest.

With the House and Senate both making concessions, conferees on the District supply bill yesterday eliminated more than $1,000,000 in appropriations and indicated a report will be filed today recommending approximately $47,000,000 for the next fiscal year.

Among the tentative decisions understood to have been reached yesterday were that:

The Pennsylvania avenue bridge will remain in the bill.

Fifty additional policemen voted by the Senate will be reduced to between 16 and 25.

The northwest public health center, carried in the 1938 appropriations act, will be held up because a provision for purchase of the Homeopathic Hospital will be deleted.

School Playgrounds.

All school playgrounds will be operated by the Community Center department the year around as proposed by the House.

An appropriation of $60,000 for drafting plans for a new library on the Municipal Center site will be restored.

Thomas Circle underpass and the K street overpass, written into the bill by the House, will be accepted by the Senate.

The Senate amendment substituting nurses for six additional resident physicians at Gallinger Hospital will be stricken out.

A limitation holding relief expenditures in any one month to one-twelfth of the $900,000 appropriation may be eliminated.

The Children's Receiving Home will be operated until January 1, after which other provisions will be made.

May Recede on Armory.

The conferees will meet again this afternoon to decide finally on a few items still in controversy, including the National Training School for Girls, the National Guard Armory and the proposed Massschusetts avenue bridge over Rock Creek parkway.

Senate conferees indicated they might recede on the armory site in view of House opposition. Inclusion of the Massachusetts avenue bridge, it is understood, will depend upon whether or not there is enough money left in the highway

D. C. Pastor's Fine Of $100 Remitted; Md. Justice Irked

Frederick, Md., March 14 (A.P.).—A fine of $100 imposed on the Rev. Raphael H. Miller, of National City Christion Church in Washington, last November for speeding has been remitted by Gov. Nice, Justice Roger H. Geisbert said tonight.

Justice Geisbert said he was talking to Sergt. W. R. May, commander of the State police substation near Frederick, when the pastor's car flashed by them speeding 75 miles an hour.

"I saw him speeding with my own eyes," said the justice. "I gave him the minimum fine for speeding over 60 miles an hour and added $1.45 for costs. I even accompanied him to a bank in Frederick so that the Rev. Miller could cash a check to pay the fine.

"Since then he has written to many State officials asking for the return of his money, and they have kept me busy explaining why I fined him. I don't think it's right."

Rep. Bloom Plunges Into Spat To Deny That He Wears Them

By Sidney Olson.

Representative Sol Bloom (Democrat), of New York, yesterday issued a vigorous denial of reports that he wore spats.

This added still another facet to the political situation complicated with the announcement Saturday by Chairman Sam McReynolds (Democrat), of Tennessee, that he would not seek a Senate seat this fall.

Bloom's anti-spat statement preceded an announcement authorized by President Roosevelt at the White House that he had not had Sol Bloom in mind when he wrote McReynolds that "to me it would be tragic to have you give it (chairmanship of the House Foreign Affairs Committee) up." Bloom is No. 2 man on that important committee and would automatically succeed to the chairmanship if McReynolds sought the Senate seat now held by George L. (Marbles) Berry, former head of Labor's Non-Partisan League.

Through his secretary, Stephen T. Early, the President said that at no time did the President have Mr. Bloom in mind when he used the word "tragic." The President meant that he considered McReynolds of greater importance in the House than in the Senate so far as the Administration's program was concerned, in view of McReynolds' experience in such matters. # Million Hail Hitler in Vienna; Britain Calls for Volunteers To Guard Nation in Air Raids

Chamberlain Warns All Citizens to Be Ready for 'Any Effort.'

Fails to Pledge Safety of Czechs

Both Conservatives and Liberals Urge Armed French Alliance.

European Reaction.

In France, Socialist Premier Leon Blum promised Czechoslovakia military aid if Hitler turns next to the 3,500,000 Germans in the war-born republic.

Britain Asks Volunteers.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 14.—Prime Minister Chamberlain today pointed Britain's manpower toward full wartime footing to check Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's thrusts at Central Europe.

He bluntly rejected Germany's sharp contention Britain had "no right" to interest herself in Austrian independence but failed to give any pledge for safeguarding Czechoslovakia.

Speaking before a packed and tense House of Commons, the angular prime minister, in a hoarse voice, demanded the support of the legislators and the country's 47,000,000 citizens for tremendous new defense steps which might include everyone.

That sounded like the first faint thunder of conscription.

Conscription Denied.

Semiofficial spokesmen, however, hastened to say he did not mean military conscription was an imminent possibility.

Influential British conservatives for some time have been campaigning for a Nazi-like "compulsory national service" for all Britons, perhaps labor camp training.

Sharply backing Chamberlain's demand, Home Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare outside Parliament broadcast a call for a million volunteer air raid precaution workers to safeguard Britain from "a knockout blow" from the air.

". . . The more disturbed is Continental Europe," Sir Samuel said, "the more urgent it is for us to make every possible preparation against a most dangerous form of modern warfare. . . ."

He addressed the appeal largely to "men over 30," declaring the government considered younger Britons "would want to take part in active defense" of the nation.

Under Britain's elaborate air-raid precautions, the volunteer workers

Army Planes Open Tests Over Florida

Jacksonville, Fla., March 14 (A.P.). The Army spread its wings over Florida today and will test them during Air Corps maneuvers for the next two weeks.

More than 125 war planes, mostly battle birds of the pursuit and bombardment type, were stationed here and at Tampa, Sarasota, Lakeland and Orlando. About 190 officers and 1,000 enlisted men will take part in the aerial games.

Air Corps press officers said the chief purpose of the maneuvers was to test the ability of the General Headquarters Air Force second wing to carry on operations far removed from regularly established bases.

Man With Blowtorch Sets Nazi Flag Afire

St. Louis, March 14 (U.P.).—The German swastika, flying from the German consulate here in celebration of the union of Germany and Austria, was set afire late today by an unidentified man as a crowd in the street below cheered.

The consulate is located on the fourteenth floor of a downtown building. The man reached the flag from the thirteenth floor with a blow torch attached to a long pole. Cheers from the crowd drew the attention of consulate attaches who quickly drew in the burning flag. Police were unable to find the man.

Poles and Letts Massing After Border Clash

Warsaw Held Ready to Issue Ultimatum to Lithuania Today.

By the United Press.

London (Tuesday), March 15.—The News-Chronicle said today in a dispatch from Vilna, Poland, that Polish and Lithuanian troops were concentrating on opposite sides of the frontier, because of a border clash, "that mass demonstrations were being held in Poland against Lithuania and that Poland was expected to issue an ultimatum today.

The paper said that the crowds shouted "We must march on Lithuania" because of the incident, which was said to have occurred last Thursday between Polish and Lithuanian frontier guards near Radowka Wiersze, opposite Vilna. One Polish guard was reportedly killed and several wounded.

The News-Chronicle said tension was mounting rapidly. It said Polish military chiefs at Warsaw discussed retaliatory measures and were expected to issue the ultimatum today after Marshal Edward RydSmiwgly confers with Foreign

A source close to authority said even peaceful penetration by Hitler would be resisted by French arms.

San Pedro, Calif., March 14 (A.P.). The United States fleet started its secret war games of 1938 today on a real wartime basis.

A grim patrol was established off the harbors of Southern California and the fleet commander in chief, Admiral C. C. Bloch, imposed censorship of silence upon all forces. Never before has the United States fleet operated on this basis in its annual maneuvers.

Schuschnigg Still a Prisoner In Vienna; May Get Nazi Trial

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, March 14.—The commandant of the state police said tonight former Chancellor Schuschnigg was under close arrest in his nearby Belvedere Palace apartment.

Schuschnigg, heretofore, had been variously reported to have fled abroad, to have suffered a nervous breakdown in a Vienna hospital and to have been made a free man in Vienna.

President Wilhelm Miklas, Austria's other fallen official who held out against the Nazis and lost, was confined to his home. Although Miklas, who resigned yesterday on the demand of the new Nazi government, was not under arrest, he must hold himself at the disposition of the police.

The commandant said Schuschnigg's departure from Austria was not under consideration, but storm troopers and secret police still watched his every move.

Nazi leaders said the report Schuschnigg was abroad was circulated to protect him.

[In London, the News-Chronicle said Schuschnigg refused to leave Vienna when the Nazi regime decided to hold his 1-year-old son as a hostage.—Editor's note.]

An unverified report said Schuschnigg was to be brought to trial, but there was no indication on what charges.

Many of Schuschnigg's followers—some sources said more than 2,000—were in jail.

A million Austrians cheered the German Fuehrer's triumphant shout in Vienna "no force on earth can shake us" from the new Austro-German consolidation. Fear mounted among Austrian Jews.

In Berlin, Nazis' belief grew that Czechoslovakia could be Nazified without military intervention. In Washington, Czechoslovakian Minister Hurban warned that his country would resist with force any attempted German invasion.

1,000,000 Cheer Hitler.

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, March 14.—Adolf Hitler returned to Vienna today the master of all he surveyed.

No ancient despot could have exercised more control over a people than did Hitler when he stood on the balcony of the Imperial Hotel and proclaimed of his new pan-Germany:

"No force on earth can shake us!"

Frenzied throngs jammed the broad Ringstrasse for six blocks, cheering with a zeal that amounted to religious fervor. Women wept because the great leader at last had arrived.

Crowd Demands Presence.

Standing on the balcony of his hotel, Hitler—one face in a sea of faces—seemed insignificant until a huge searchlight picked him out with a pencil of light in the dusk.

Der Fuehrer, apparently, had not intended to speak until tomorrow at 11 a. m. Then he will address Vienna and the German world from the Heroes' Square.

But for three hours the crowds demonstrated before his hotel, calling him back to his balcony again and again. Officers with Hitler said the jubilation surpassed even that of the early Nazi days in Berlin.

Finally he raised his hands for silence in answer to the clamor for his voice and a hundred thousand persons in the street became silent.

"The German Reich as it stands today is inviolable," he shouted, "no one can shatter it!"

Enters in Triumph.

Smiling and obviously deeply moved, he exclaimed:

"German compatriots! I have felt in the last few days all the emotions which now stir you.

"This has been an historical change and the entire German people feel your emotions.

"Not 2,000,000 people in one city, but 75,000,000 people in one nation are stirred to the depth of feeling which you now are demonstrating.

"I am deeply stirred by this historic change.

"You all live up to your oath, all of you from Koenigsburg to Hamburg and down to Vienna. You do so in deepest emotion"

Hitler entered Vienna, once the seat of the mighty Hapsburgs and now just a provincial capital in a Germany Hitler has flung from the Baltic Sea almost to the Adriatic, at 4:50 p. m.

His entry ended a triumphal progress that carried him 100 miles through cheering, flag-waving throngs from Linz, where he had halted since Saturday.

With him came a steadily increasing entourage of high Nazi officials

Debate Renews Anglo-U.S.Navy 'Pool' Charges

Tinkham Quotes Churchill as House Argues on Expansion Bill.

Renewed charges of secret Anglo-American agreements involving a "pooling" of British and American navies in the event of war, were made by Representative George Holden Tinkham (Republican), of Massachusetts, at the close of yesterday's House debate on the $1,121,000,000 naval expansion bill.

Tinkham, joined by Representatives Hamilton Fish, jr. (Republican), of New York; Gerald J. Boileau (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and Ralph Church (Republican), of Illinois, attacked the 20 per cent fleet increase on the basis that its passage meant commitment of the United States to an Anglo-American defense "arrangement."

Chairman Carl Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, of the House Naval Affairs Committee, answered Tinkham's charges, which were based on a newspaper dispatch crediting Winston Churchill, member of the British World War cabinet, with revealing such an "arrangement."

Vinson Cites Denials.

Vinson said: "The gentleman has not a scintilla of evidence with which to back his statement. On the contrary he has a positive declaration from public officials (of the United States) denying any such statement; yet the gentleman stands on the floor of the House and challenges the honesty and integrity of these public officials and relies on a newspaper article."

When Tinkham answered that he would allow "this committee" to settle that question, "and asserted 'I have given the evidence,'" Vinson snapped:

"I do not think the gentleman has given any evidence to convince anyone except the gentleman himself whose mind is beclouded on the subject."

Swift Passage Predicted.

The war-frenzied European situation, created by Fuehrer Hitler in his absorption of Austria into the Reich, brought predictions by House leaders yesterday that any real opposition to the naval expansion program had waned to "the vanishing point." They expected only perfunctory debate today and tomorrow, with swift passage certain thereafter.

Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, seized on Austrian dispatches as evidence of "the inevitability" of another general war, and declared that the situation made it imperative for this country to increase its naval strength.

Dies said, "Hitler was able to do what he did because he was backed up by a strong, well-equipped army."

Opposition to the bill was in two camps: conservatives, chiefly Republicans, who have often expressed fears that Congressional authorization of a huge Navy will be used by President Roosevelt to involve the United States in foreign wars, and even that such a fleet might be used for aggression; and liberals, chiefly young Democrats, who are united on an isolationist platform that the United States should "mind its own business."

Representative Ralph Brewster (Republican), Maine, a foe of the bill, answered Chairman Vinson's opening argument with the assertion that "America has plenty of problems to occupy us here at home. Let us not meddle again to our sorrow in any Asiatic or European mess."

Defense Only, Says Vinson.

Vinson began the debate with the assertion that the armament program would be used to "quarantine ourselves from catching the grievous disease of war." Vinson, using the word "quarantine" in a sense opposite to that usually employed, was answering critics of President Roosevelt's famous Chicago address in which he mentioned the possibility of quaranting aggressor nations.

Vinson insisted that the fleet expansion was to be used solely for defense, saying:

"The increase authorized in this bill will furnish the minimum national defense necessary to attain our national security and preserve our republic. To be fully prepared for eventualities in this peace-loving Nation does not create the danger of war."

Pacifists Cite Austria's Fate to Force America's Head Deeper Into Isolationist Sand.

By Franklyn Waltman

Austria's tragic end at the hands of Fascist Adolph Hitler may have an influence on American foreign policy which will last for many years, shaping and coloring world events much as did this country's rejection of the Treaty of Versailles and repudiation of the League of Nations.

WALTMAN.

Striking while this country is gripped by horror and revulsion over the tactics of the ruthless Hitler, a group of pacifist leaders plan to renew with greater vigor the drive further to isolate the United States from world affairs—actually to bury its head deeper in the sand—because this Nation cannot be isolated from world currents.

Within a few days, as revealed Sunday night by Norman Thomas, the Socialist leader, organization will be completed of the "Keep America Out of War Committee," made up of various pacifist groups, to co-ordinate their energies and propaganda toward a common objective. That objective comprises immediately the defeat of the bill to increase the Navy, passage of an amendment to the Constitution requiring a national referendum before war could be declared, withdrawal of American gunboats from the Yangtze River, defeat of the May bill and all other proposals for universal conscription.

Included in the program also is an indorsement of the Hull reciprocal trade program and a world economic conference when practicable and feasible and a demand for the storing up, where possible, of raw materials which the United States must import in order that this country might have in its hands supplies should a general war break out.

How far this movement will get is problematical. The reaction of the average American to the events of the last few days in Europe is a combination of a prayer of gratitude that he does not live in Europe and a fervent desire that this country keep out of the affairs of the Old World. It is a natural and logical reaction.

The name of the "Keep America Out of War Committee," moreover, may be counted on to ensnare many emotional and unthinking, even though sincere, persons. There are few, if any, men and women in this country with hearts so cold as to desire any course of action that was not designed to "keep America out of war." Contemplation of the consequences of another war staggers the imagination and chills the heart of the least understanding. But the real question, however, is how we can keep America out of war.

This is no time to be dogmatic or intolerant of sincerely formulated viewpoints. Perhaps Mr. Thomas and his followers have the solution to the problem of keeping America out of war. But a large body of persons who have given many years of study to the problem and who have thought deeply about it do not believe so.

It is their opinion that Ludlow war referendum amendments, neutrality acts and similar royal roads to peace are more dangerous than protective, do more harm than good. They feel that once war again envelops the world it is a small chance that America can remain untouched. Even if this country escapes physical participation, such a war would leave a dreadful mark on this Nation.

Consequently this body of opinion believes that the United States should direct its attention to preventing the much prophesied second world war. And they do not think this country can exert any influence in that direction if its President and Secretary of State are constantly harassed by pressure-propaganda groups and are placed in a strait jacket by such things as Ludlow resolutions and mandatory neutrality acts.

As for the proposed increase in the Navy, this commentator, along with many other persons, is unhappy about it. But I for one cannot find it in my heart to condemn this legislation, even though I have long believed that armaments feed on armaments and eventually lead to war.

Yet the responsibility—and it is a dreadful responsibility—for providing this country with adequate national defense does not rest on me. It rests on the President of the United States. Consequently, when he decides that the Navy or the Army should be increased, within reasonable limits, as necessary to fulfill his responsibility, I think he should be supported in that decision.

My only qualification is that the proposed increase be reasonable and that necessarily must be determined in relation to what other nations are doing. Every nation in the world, from the smallest to the largest, has greatly increased its armed forces in the last five years. Many of them today are spending three or four times on armaments what they were five years ago.

Mr. Roosevelt has not asked for an inordinately large increase in the Navy. His program contemplates a 20 per cent increase in our sea power, at a cost of approximately $1,200,000,000—not within the coming year but to be spread over several years. His request, in view of the circumstances, cannot be termed unreasonable, no matter how much you dislike his action.

The Navy bill, however, appears to be in no danger. Yet there is a danger that the renewed attempt for action on a war referendum amendment may succeed in this period of emotion. Such a step is too grave, too hazardous to the future of the world and this country, to be taken in a period of emotion and hysteria. If we take that step, at least let us fully examine, calmly and dispassionately, into the entire subject. Let us not be fooled by slogans, as we have been before. "Keeping America out of war" may be as illusory a slogan as "making the world safe for democracy."

Lumber Shipments 56 Per Cent of 1929

The lumber industry during the week ended March 5 stood at 48 per cent of the 1929 weekly average of production and 56 per cent of average 1929 shipments. Production was about 54 per cent of the corresponding week of 1929; shipments about 62 per cent of that week's shipments. The 1938 week showed some increase in production and new orders over the previous week; slight loss in shipments.

New bookings in the past three weeks have been the heaviest reported for any weeks, but one, since early October. All items in the week ended March 5, 1938, were lower than during the corresponding week of 1937.

James Roosevelt Back From 'War'

James Roosevelt, son and secretary of the President, arrived back at his White House desk yesterday after two weeks of training in Marine-Navy maneuvers in southern waters.

As a lieutenant colonel in the Marine Reserves, young Roosevelt participated in a landing operation near Ponce, Puerto Rico, where native regulars and National Guard served as the defense.

Record Shows How President Felt About NRA

Further Releases From Press Conferences Deal With Court Ruling.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt made public yesterday excerpts from the stenographic record of his press conferences, the language in which he explained some New Deal objectives to newspapermen during the first four years of his Administration.

The President did not release the complete stenographic report of his conferences. He selected only portions of transcripts of 16 of the 332 conferences—held from March 8, 1933, to December 29, 1936.

In yesterday's releases the President chose labor and other social reforms, the interdependence of the States, the broad view of interstate commerce, tax evasion and avoidance, neutrality, antitrust laws, holding companies and the Supreme Court.

In Plain English.

June 15, 1934—The President: About 120,000,000 people out of 125,000,000 understand plain English; . . . Section 7-A (NRA law) says that the workers can choose representatives. Now if they want to choose the Ahkoond of Swat they have a perfect right to do so. If they want to choose the Royal Geographic Society, they can do that. If they want to choose a union, of any kind, they can do that. They have free choice of representation, and that means not merely an individuel or a worker, but it means a corporation or union or anybody.

May 31, 1935 (after the Supreme Court had invalidated NRA codes)—The President: A great deal of that legislation (World War) was far more violative of the strict interpretation of the constitution than any legislation that was passed in 1933 . . . conferred upon the Executive far greater power over human beings and over property than anything that was done in 1933. But the Supreme Court has finally ruled that extraordinary conditions do not create or enlarge constitutional power. It is a very interesting statement on the part of the court. . . .

On Interstate Commerce.

Since 1885 the court, in various decisions, has enlarged on the definition of interstate commerce . . . It was clearly the opinion of Congress before this decision . . . that the words "interstate commerce" applied not only to an actual shipment of goods, but also to a great many others things that affected interstate commerce.

The whole tendency over these years has been to view the interstate commerce clause in the light of present-day civilization. The country was in the horse-and-buggy age when that clause was written. . . .

And so we are facing a very, very great national non-partisan issue. . . . Whether we are going to relegate to the 48 States practically all control over economic conditions—not only State economic conditions, but national economic conditions; and along with that whether we are going to relegate to the States all control over social and working conditions throughout the country. . . .

The other side of the picture is whether in some way we are going to turn over or restore . . . to the Federal Government the powers which exist in the national governments of every other nation in the world to enact and administer laws that have a bearing on, and general control over, national economic problems and national social problems. . . .

December 29, 1936—Question: Do you think something should be done to restore minimum pay and maximum hours by the Government?

The President: Absolutely. But don't write any story saying that the President is going to restore NRA. That is an easy, sloppy method of writing a story. Anybody can do that. What I would like to have you do is point out the fact that something has got to be done, and don't go beyond "something." Don't get out on a limb, because you know how often you have sawed off your own limb. Say that something has to be done about the elimination of child labor and long hours and starvation wages. That is as far as I would go.

Rep. Sweeney Seeks Inquiry Into Alleged Administration War Propaganda.

A resolution for a special seven-man House committee to study reports that Administratoin officials sought to "prepare the people for war" through newspapers and radio stations was introduced yesterday by Representative Martin L. Sweeney (Democrat), Ohio.

The investigation, the United Press reported, would include an alleged meeting in New York between Norman H. Davis, American roving Ambassador, and other Government officials at which Boake Carter, radio commentator, was allegedly denounced for "his consistent broadcasting of antiwar sentiment." Sweeney said the group also discussed a program for utilizing newspapers and radio stations to make the Nation war conscious.

The Senate yesterday adopted a conference report previously approved by the House on a bill to give the Federal Trade Commission broader powers to curb false advertising. The bill was then sent to the White House. Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, unsuccessfully opposed the measure, charging that House amendments had been "deliberately framed" to take away from the Food and Drug Administration its powers to prevent false advertising of food, drugs and cosmetics.

*The nomination of Thurman Arnold, Yale University Law School professor, as Assistant Attorney General, was approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee. ## Woman Gets Bonds From Park Bank

Ruth B. Judson, a depositor in the defunct Park Savings Bank, was awarded bonds valued at $5,000 by the United States Court of Appeals yesterday, although the bonds were substituted for six less valuable notes she originally deposited in a safety deposit vault at the bank.

Robert Stunz, one-time executive officer of the bank, is alleged to have substituted the bonds for six notes she deposited about six years ago. Stuntz had been charged with having stolen about $1,000,000 from the bank, which failed early in 1933. He committed suicide.

She was represented by the law firm of William Stanley and J. Edward Burroughs.

Dollar Strongest, Morgenthau Says

By the Associated Press.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau asserted yesterday that the American dollar, withstanding the shocks of Europe's troubled affairs, "is still the strongest currency in the world."

"It is quite remarkable," the Treasury head said at a press conference, "that in the last few days the business of America has not been affected by what was going on in Europe, thanks to the tripartite agreement, the stabilization fund, and the sterilization fund."

Wood, Textile Interests Fight British Treaty

Hull Scores New England's Attitude as Hearings Are Opened.

By the Associated Press.

Administration tariff experts, beginning hearings yesterday on a proposed reciprocal trade agreement with Great Britain, heard legislators from Western wool-growing States and from Eastern industrial areas oppose tariff reductions.

"We of the West unite with the woolen and worsted manufacturers in asking for a continuance of the trade barriers behind which our industry has grown," declared Representative Pierce (Democrat), Oregon.

Other congressional witnesses, with a few exceptions, criticized the reciprocal trade program and demanded "adequate" tariff protection.

Meanwhile, Secretary of State Hull made a vigorous defense of his trade agreements, calling them an instrument of peace "in a period when political tension has increased."

In a letter to 15 Republican members of Congress from New England, Hull turned down their suggestion for what he termed a virtual suspension of the trade agreements program. They had urged that any further agreement be deferred until costs of production in this country could be ascertained.

Hull said the agreements were necessary to dispose of America's surplus agricultural products and to stimulate exports of manufactured products.

"There can be no greater illusion," he said, "than to suppose that New England's essential interests can be divorced in this matter from those of the rest of the country."

Auto Crash Fatal To Maj. L. B. Bibb

Maj. Lewis B. Bibb, 56, Medical Corps, U. S. Army, died Sunday at Wilmington, N. C., of injuries received in an automobile accident the previous day, the War Department was informed yesterday.

A native of Bellmine, Tex., he graduated in medicine from the University of Texas in 1908.

Entering the Army Medical Corps in the World War, Maj. Bibb was an honor graduate of the Army Medical School here and hed been on duty at the General Dispensary and surgeon of the General Headquarters Company of Washington from March, 1934, until October, 1935. He also was a graduate of the Medical Field Service School, Basic and Advanced Courses.

At the time of his death Maj. Bibb was on duty as instructor, National Guard Divisional Area, Atlanta, Ga.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Marian Bibb; two daughters and a son, all of Fort McPherson, Ga.

Zone Bill Scored At Senate Inquiry

The proposed elimination of nonconforming commercial property rights in the new District zoning bill drew fire yesterday as hearings were opened before a Senate subcommittee headed by Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana.

George B. Fraser, of the Chevy Chase Citizens Association, told the subcommittee that the authority might drive some businesses out of existence. He suggested that nonconforming property being used prior to 1920 be exempt.

Vernon E. West, principal assistant corporation counsel, pointed out that a board of zoning adjustment which would be set up by the bill would have authority to issue special permits in instances where undue hardship would result from strick enforcement of the law.

Freedom Gift Of God, Says Mgr. Sheen

Catholic U. Professor Asks Religion as Basis for Education.

Recognition of the divine source of human freedom is the foundation of true democracy, Mgr. Fulton Sheen, professor of philosophy at Catholic University, declared last night as he opened the series of Carroll lectures sponsored by the Boys Guidance Association.

Asserting that "many false definitions of democracy are floating around," Mgr. Sheen said: "We see how badly the term is abused when 3,000 American boys fight for the Reds in Spain—as the Abraham Lincoln Battalion. And we hear the Russian Ambassador to this country call for co-operation between 'democratic' Russia and America in the present world crisis."

Americanism, he said, rests on belief in the individual personality of man, "safeguarding certain rights within himself, derived not from the state but from God. Our Bill of Rights, the first ten amendments to the Constitution, protects the individual from any encroachment by the Federal Government on his God-given rights.

"If it were the state which gave us our rights, the state could take them away," the speaker said. "But as long as you keep God in your national life, you will keep your freedom. God is a source of rights, beyond the province of the state."

Mgr. Sheen listed Mexico, Germany and Russia as totalitarian nations, where the citizen is considered to exist only for purposes of the state. "If our freedom derives from the spirit, and a government then negates the spiritual side of life, the people are bound to be slaves."

39 Picket Nazis, Austrians Here; All Are Jailed

Repercussions of Hitler's annexation of Austria extended to Washington yesterday as 39 men and women defied the newly enacted embassy antipicketing act by parading with anti-Nazi placards before the German Embassy and the Austrian Legation. All were arrested.

Charged with violation of the picketing act, the 31 men and 8 women were held last night in four precinct police stations. Collateral has been set at $50 each.

One Refused Arrest.

While police waited 15 minutes for arrival of patrol wagons, the pickets chanted, "Swastika Means Murder," "Down With Fascism" and "The Swastika Is Covered With Blood."

Several hundred spectators lined the opposite curb of Massachusetts avenue, while members of the German Embassy staff could be seen peering from behind windows of the building.

A latecomer, who fought with police to join his comrades, was forcibly barred from the line. Police would not allow him to be arrested despite his entreaties.

Spectators Join Singing.

Joined by spectators across the streets, pickets burst out with "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "America" shortly before arrival of two patrols from the Second Precinct. Police met no resistance as they bundled pickets and placards into the vehicles.

Police promptly arrested ten more pickets who appeared outside the Embassy immediately after removal of their comrades.

The pickets, first to be arrested under the new act, will be defended by the legal staff of the American Civil Liberties Union, it was stated last night by M. J. Wilsie, secretary of the organization.

The four pickets outside the Austrian Legation represented the Young People's Socialist League.

WPA Requires Job Hunters to Prove Needs

Deputy Administrator Explains New Policy on Applications.

Applicants must show that they need relief before WPA jobs will be assigned them, Otto J. Cass, deputy administrator, announced yesterday.

Cass said the WPA has been making its own investigation of the applicants. As a result, many persons believe that it is no longer necessary to be in need of a job in order to qualify, he explained. Previously applicants were certified by the public assistance division of the Board of Public Welfare.

More than 600 applicants have been placed in jobs created recently. A total of 2,000 jobs was granted the District on local projects. An additional 510 persons have been certified for jobs, but as yet have not been appointed, Cass said.

At the same time, Cass pointed out, about 4,750 applicants who applied recently for works jobs have not been interviewed by the WPA investigating staff.

Applications are still being accepted at the office, 460 C street northwest.

Former Judge Kills His Wife And Self in Ohio

Mate a Virginia Woman; Prominent Lawyer Had Been Ill.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, March 14.—Coleman Avery, 58, former Ohio Supreme Court Justice, died today a short time after police said he shot and killed his attractive wife, Sara, then turned the gun on himself.

Mrs. Avery was the former Sara L. Loving, of Lynchburg, Va.

Lieut. Martin Roettinger said a revolver was found beside Avery as he lay unconscious near the body of Mrs. Avery in the kitchen of their home on fashionable North Bend road. Roettinger reported it was "plainly a case of murder and suicide."

Avery recently had been in ill health, members of the family said.

Striking a Woman, Then a Policeman, Nets Man 120 Days

Double-barreled assault charges resulted in a 120-day jail sentence yesterday for Earl Lawrence Strickland, 21, of 2315 First street northwest.

Policeman James A. Godbold of the Second Princinct encountered Strickland Monday at Freedmen's Hospital, he testified yesterday. He had escorted a prisoner to the hospital, he said, and was about to leave when a white woman called to him from the emergency room where she was receiving treatment.

She gave her name as Hope Dawson, 31 Bates street northwest, and accused Strickland of striking her on the mouth. Strickland, who was with her, asked the officer to step outside the room. Policeman Godbold placed him under arrest and was about to handcuff him when the man struck him and attempted to kick him.

Strickland was given 90 days for the alleged assault on Miss Dawson and 30 days for striking the policeman.

We Should Stay In Philippines, Asserts McNutt

Declares, However, American Sovereignty Won't Be Imposed by Force.

Declaring that "if our flag comes down, the Philippines will become bloody ground and the center of war within war for a generation," Paul V. McNutt, High Commissioner of the Philippines in a radio speech last night called for "a realistic re-examination of the needs of these people and the long-range interest of ourselves."

McNutt had never previously made any public declaration of his attitude toward Philippine independence. His statement, coming on the eve of his departure tonight on his return trip there after his report to President Roosevelt on conditions in the islands and a series of conferences with Administration officials, was regarded, therefore, as highly significant.

"If this study," continued the High Commissioner, "results in a policy favoring a permanent political and economic relationship with the Philippines, it shall be, I trust, because the Filipinos want it and because it is in aid of our national purposes. America will not impose her sovereignty by force upon any people. The enduring welfare and safety of both countries are to be the paramount consideration.

"It is my conviction that they are not far apart and that they can be harmonized—harmonized for the salvation of the Philippines, for the larger interests of America and for the peace of the Pacific."

Earlier in his speech McNutt discussed the Philippine question from the political side, the economic side and the problem of military protection. He said:

"On the political side our flag and sovereignty should remain, allowing to the Philippines every ounce of domestic autonomy they can absorb—holding in our own hands foreign affairs, tariffs, immigration, currency and public debt—scarcely more than marks of the necessary reservations of a dominion. We should feel free in case of any crisis to help preserve the democratic basis of the Philippine government.

"On the economic side we should from time to time give the Philippines the best trade deal we can without injuring our domestic producers. . . .

"Then there is the problem of military protection. I venture to predict that so long as our flag flies over the islands no foreign power will trespass, irrespective of the military forces stationed there. So long as our flag flies there, the Philippines will be the cornerstone of peaceful reconstruction in the Far East.

The High Commissioner said he would leave tonight for Chicago where he will address the Chicago Economic Club tomorrow night. After a three-day visit with his parents in Indianapolis, he will leave by clipper plane March 23 for the Philippines.

Widow, Kidnaper Of Dr. Ross Meet

Chicago, March 14 (AP).—Mrs. May Ross confronted John Henry Seadlund, the man who kidnaped her husband, Charles S. Ross, 72, for the first time today in a Federal courtroom, where a jury will decide whether Seadlund must die for the crime.

Quietly dramatic, the meeting produced no visible recognition between the two.

Seadlund stared intently at Mrs. Ross when, clad in black and in quavering voice, she testified as the first witness in the trial to determine not the guilt or innocence of Seadlund, but whether the extreme penalty shall be imposed. Seadlund had pleaded guilty to the $50,000 ransom kidnaping last September 25, after which Ross was slain at the abductors' cave hideout near Spooner, Wis.

Police Hold 4 Men As Pass Forgers

Police yesterday arrested four colored men in connection with the forging of Capital Transit weekly passes, believed to have been used by laborers for the last two months.

Seized by members of the pick-up squad, the men gave their names as James A. Deal, 22, 1528 Church street northwest; James F. Small, 18, and Walter J. Blackborn, 22, 1917 Thirteenth street northwest, and Eugene Osborne, 28, 1743 U street northwest.

Lieut. Joseph W. Shimon, chief of the pickup squad, said that a quantity of crayons and water colors also were found in Small's home. A loaded pistol was taken out of the Deal house, he said.

The arrest of the men came after a complaint was received from the street car company. It was revealed that the forgeries were traced from an original $1.25 pass and colored with crayons and paints.

Bicyclist, 17, Injured In Crash With Truck

William Howard, 17, 1127 fourth street southwest, was injured yesterday when his bicycle collided with a truck at Florida avenue and L street northeast. Taken to Casualty Hospital, the boy was said to have sustained scalp lacerations and brain concussion.

Three Arsenal Spies Plead Guilty in Britain

London, March 14 (AP).—Three former employes of the big Woolwich Arsenal, trapped by the blonde "Miss X" of the British counter-espionage service, today pleaded guilty of smuggling out armaments secrets.

They were P. E. Glading, Albert Williams and George Whomack.

Magill Gives Senate Bad News on Revenue Bill

gested they may have reached the point of diminishing returns.

Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), of Wisconsin, continued to press for a broadening of the income tax base by lowering of exemptions. He said he was aware of the political arguments against such a change during an election year, but was "not discouraged."

La Follette would lower exemptions for single persons from $1,000 to $800, and for married persons, from $2,500 to $2,000. This would make about 1,400,000 additional persons subject to Federal income tax.

Besides Undersecretary of the Treasury Magill, tax experts, questioned yesterday by the Senate group included Arthur H. Kent, an assistant general counsel of the Treasury Department, and L. H. Parker and C. F. Stam, of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue.

Experts Disagree.

Discrepancies in estimates between Treasury and Congressional experts were discussed. Parker, for example, believes the 25-cent per gallon increase in liquor taxes will raise nearly $35,000,000, largely offsetting the revenue shortage feared by the Treasury. Magill estimated the liquor tax increase will net only $19,000,000 additional.

MaGill was questioned about the so-called "1B" surtax on closely held corporations eliminated by the House from the Ways and Means Committee bill. The Senate is overwhelmingly opposed to this proposal, which was sired by the Administration.

Tongue in Cheek?

Asked if he favored the closely held company tax, Magill smilingly replied that he did. Magill did not reply when a Senator remarked that he had spoken "with his tongue in his cheek, but with as much grace as he could under the circumstances."

On one other occasion, the Treasury spokesman was twitted good-naturedly by committeemen. One member asked if Magill "would like to weep on the committee's shoulder." Magill said he would do so, if the committee desired it. Another Senator put in that Herman Oliphant, Treasury general counsel, and not Magill, was the proper official "to do the weeping." Oliphant has been charged with originating the idea of the closely held corporation tax, now doomed.

Harrison hopes to bring out a bill within 10 days that raises the full $5,330,000,000 sought by the Treasury. This amount would represent an increase over the $4,597,000,000 netted from 1937 income tax returns, but would fall short of the $5,698,000,000 the Treasury hopes to collect for the current fiscal year. Magill stressed the fact that an increase in business activities would produce a much larger return on the same tax base in future years.

Flat Tax Favored.

The Treasury undersecretary said his department will suggest flat corporation income tax rates as a substitute for the House 16-to-20 per cent undivided profits tax spread, at the Senate committee's request. Asked if a flat 18 per cent tax will be recommended, he declined to say. He said he thought a flat 16 per cent rate would be "too low."

Harrison already has suggested a flat 15 per cent tax on capital gains from assets held over one or two years, as a substitute for House provisions reaching capital gains through regular income tax brackets.

"Business wants the profits tax repealed completely and, as I understand it, is willing to pay a higher normal rate," said Harrison. "We have asked for estimates of revenues possible from higher normal rates not only on income, but on capital gains."

An informal canvass of the Senate Finance Committee yesterday indicated Senators now stand as follows on complete repeal of the undivided profits tax principle:

For repeal—Harrison, King, George, Walsh, Bailey, Clark, Byrd, Lonergan, Gerry, Brown and Herring (Democrats), and Capper, Vandenberg, Townsend and Davis (Republicans).

G-Men Assist Search For Kidnaped Boy, 12

New Rochelle, N. Y., March 14 (AP).—The Federal Bureau of Investigation officially entered the Peter Levine case today, sending to points throughout the country photographs of the supposedly kidnaped 12-year-old boy.

Peter disappeared from home February 24, and his father, Murray Levine, a well-to-do New York lawyer, has made futile efforts to find him. Federal authorities previously had kept a hands-off attitude at the father's request.

Bloom Enters Spat to Deny He Wears 'Em

nolds and Bloom came into the House the same year—1922.)

But Sol Bloom yesterday, despite anxiety at radio reports broadcast repeatedly in New York City Sunday to the effect that President Roosveelt does not want Sol Bloom as chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, was more seriously concerned at the statement in news stories that he was addicted to the wearing of spats. He said:

"At no time do I ever wear spats. When the weather is cold I sometimes wear black gaiters to keep my feet warm, but I don't wear spats, ever, any more than I wear carnations in my buttonhole."

Reprecussions to the last remark were awaited from Representative William I. Sirovich (Democrat), New York, and Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, both of whom are never seen in public without vivid red carnations in their lapels.

McReynolds, also coming to the rescue of Bloom, issued a statement yesterday, similar in content to that of the White House, declaring that he "sincerely regretted" implications drawn from the President's letter to the effect that Bloom was not wanted as chairman.

McReynolds sacrificed his ambitions to become Senator—despite the general conclusion of observers that he would easily defeat Berry—under unprecedented mass pressure from above, with letters from the President, Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Majority Leader Sam Rayburn and Speaker William B. Bankhead urging him to remain in the House.

Indian Fighter, 74, Taken From Jail To Soldiers Home

Albert Nelson, 74-year-old Indian fighter, who was sent to jail for six months last Wednesday on a drunk charge, got a new lease on life yesterday when his sentence was suspended.

Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran, who sentenced the aged veteran as an "habitual offender," reversed his original decision at the request of the War Department.

At the close of the court day yesterday, a representative of the Adjutant General's office appeared before Judge Curran and interceded for Nelson. Nelson was released from District Jail and sent to the Soldiers' Home where he can spend the rest of his life.

fund after providing for the Pennsylvania avenue bridge, Thomas Circle underpass and the K street overpass.

Reduction of the budget total by more than $1,000,000 will cut the deficit and the new tax burden by the same amount. Instead of $4,700,000, the District revenue bill will need to raise only about $3,600,000 or less if business privilege tax collections produce more than the anticipated $2,300,000 this year.

The House sub-committee on fiscal affairs yesterday continued revision of the tax bill but reached no important conclusions, according to Chairman Nichols (Democrat), Oklahoma.

Complaints Received.

Senator Thomas, chairman of the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations, disclosed that he has received numerous anonymous letters calling attention to the assignment of Washington policemen to jobs as clerks, chauffeurs and "running yachts."

"We intend to turn these over to Maj. Brown for a check-up," he said.

It is understood that the Senate conferees have agreed to a reduction in the Senate increases in policemen on the ground that more patrolmen will be available if taken off of other assignments.

Library Fund Restored.

The Senate managers agreed to restoration of an appropriation for plans for a new library with the understanding that the building itself will not be authorized immediately. The library will carry no designation, although it was proposed as a new main building but amended in the House to the designation of a branch library to evade a point of order.

Elimination of the language reappropriating $165,000 for the purchase of the Homeopathic Hospital to be used as a health center came as a surprise in view of the sponsorship of the plan by Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee.

Jones School Retained.

The decision means, moreover, that the Jones Elementary School will be retained with no provision for a new school. District officials already have plans drafted for a health center to be constructed on the site of the Jones School.

The shift back to resident physicians for Gallinger was made over the opposition of the District Medical Society, which has addressed several appeals to Senators and House and Senate conferees. The society insists that nurses are more important than resident physicians, as Washington doctors will furnish medical service for the Gallinger patients.

The final victory of the Community Center Department over the Playground department in the school playground dispute will reduce the latter's activities to a minimum. Heretofore it has supervised all school playgrounds during vacation periods.

Both parents and Malcolm were disturbed as little as possible, and in their quiet quarters the new member of the family was continually gaining vigor, according to Malcolm Davis, bird keeper and godfather of the baby penguin.

Meanwhile, the prospective brother, or sister, of Malcolm gave no sign of breaking its shell as the parents continued to take turns guarding the remaining egg and caring for Malcolm.

StormTroopers Beat Jews, Take Stores, Money

Thousands Flee Vienna as Plundering Becomes General.

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, March 14.—Jews in Vienna felt the sharp sting of Nazi wrath today and heard the worst was yet to come.

Thousands fled the city on advice of leaders who felt the day's series of plunderings, beatings, arrests and dispossessions were only a forerunner of more drastic persecution.

The Leopoldstadt District—which amounts almost to a ghetto—was an area of fear.

Jews tried to hide themselves in their homes but frequently heard the relentless tramp of Nazi storm troopers' boots on the stairs and the knocks of rifle butts on their doors.

Store Stocks Seized.

That meant one of two things: Arrest or a summons to open their stores to Nazis in need of shoes, clothing and food.

Jewish shopkeepers in "Judengasse" (Jews' alley) in downtown Vienna were roused from their beds and taken to their stores where armed youths wearing Swastikas seized their stocks.

Dr. Heinrich Neumann, throat specialist who twiced treated the Duke of Windsor when the Duke was King Edward VIII of England, was arrested.

He was seized because he was one of 20 or 30 wealthy Jews who gave large sums—under compulsion from Guigo Zernatto, secretary of the now-abolished Fatherland Front Party—to an advertising fund for Kurt Schuschnigg's plebiscite which did not come to pass.

Two youths with weapons entered the offices of a Jewish congregation, searched the rooms and forced the director to turn over all the congregation's available money. They took 30,000 schillings ($5,670).

Desider Friedmann, leader of the Jewish cultural community, asked Chancellor Arthur Seyss-Inquart for an audience to present a plea for protection of Jews.

Swastika Users Punished.

Vienna's leading sports store, Jewish-owned, was stripped of its stock.

Many Jewish coffee houses were closed or turned over to Aryan managers. Owners who failed to hear in time that they were forbidden to display Nazi flags arrived and found Storm Troopers had closed their establishments.

The four Schiffmann brothers, owners of a large department store, were arrested on charges of "attempts to smuggle money out of the country."

Palestine Quota Raised.

London, March 14 (AP).—The British government today announced an increase of approximately 25 per cent in the Jewish immigration quota for Palestine, now restricted to 8,000 persons annually.

The action was said to have been taken in view of the plight of Jews in central Europe as a whole.

Effective April 1, the following categories above the 8,000 quota will be admitted: A maximum of 2,000 persons of independent means—possession of $5,000 capital; a maximum of 1,000 laborers, 200 dependents and an unstated number of students.

Nazi Purge Ousts Walter, a Jew, as Opera Director

Vienna, March 14 (AP).—Bruno Walter, who has conducted the world's greatest orchestras in New York and the capitals of Europe, today resigned as a director of the Vienna Opera.

Berlin-born Walter, a Jew, five years ago was compelled to abandon a high place in the German musical world when the Nazis took power. Today the Nazi anti-Jewish campaign reached Vienna's cultural circles.

Dr. Herrmann Roebbeling was removed as head of the famous Burg Theater, the old imperial playhouse considered one of Europe's best. Nazis hailed this as a "joyful effect" of their cultural program.

Roebbeling's fault was that he allowed "too much boulevard trash," including a number of American plays, to be produced.

Victim of Nazi Rule

BRUNO WALTER, Jewish conductor of the world-famous Viennese Symphony Orchestra, who resigned after Nazis began persecution of Austrian Jews. He fled Germany several years ago when Nazis gained control of the government.

Shanghai Bank Circles Anxious Over New Rules

Flat Exchange Control Means Loss of Financial Prestige.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Tuesday), March 15.—Businessmen and bankers, fearful that Shanghai might lose her position as the financial crossroads of the Far East, today nervously awaited a reply from Hankow to urgent representations against new foreign exchange restrictions of the central Chinese government.

It was understood foreign banks here were asking definite allotments of foreign exchange and pleading that the new control, effective yesterday, was unwieldy and would lead to confusion and delay.

Reports from the war fronts indicated that the Japanese invaders had been stalled by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's stubborn legions.

There was a flood of conjecture on what motivated the Hankow government's exchange decree. The Hankow announcement Sunday said organization of a Japanese-dominated "federal reserve bank of China" at Peiping with issuance of its own currency necessitated the restriction.

Bankers said the Peiping "federal reserve bank" was using its own notes to buy China Central Bank notes, which were being brought to Shanghai with a demand for redemption in foreign exchange, thus providing the Japanese with foreign currency at the expense of the Chinese government.

Mexico to Force Foreign Oil Firms To Increase Pay

Mexico City, March 14 (AP).—The Mexican labor department today notified foreign oil companies it would enforce tomorrow an arbitral award raising wages and giving other benefits to 18,000 workers.

Although the companies lost an appeal to the supreme court two weeks ago, they have refused to comply with the award which they estimate would increase expenses $12,000,000 a year.

Officials of the companies—17 British and American—have removed all personal property and confidential files from their offices, fearing government intervention. Cash has been withdrawn from bank accounts and supplies reduced to a minimum.

18 Soviet Traitors Are Ordered Shot

Moscow, March 14 (AP). — The presidium of the Supreme Soviet tonight doomed 18 confessed treason plotters to firing squad sentences which it seemed likely had been carried out already.

The presidium, nominally the highest executive authority in all Russia, rejected clemency pleas of 17 of the defendants. Apparently former Foreign Trade Commissar A. P. Rosengoltz did not ask for mercy.

and behind him rolled the motorized might of Germany's war machine.

Reaching Vienna, Der Fuehrer changed from his big, six-wheeled automobile to an open car and rode, standing, through six and a half miles of the city's streets.

Church bells pealed from the time he crossed the city limits until he reached his hotel suite—over the imperial coffee house, where, as a hopeful artist, he once tried to sell his paintings.

Jewish Restrictions Formed.

Nazification of Austria, meanwhile, was being accomplished with lightning strokes, swept on by a wave of enthusiasm.

In Germany the process of reshaping the state to the National Socialist mold required years. In Austria it is being accomplished in days.

The world of Austria's Jews fell around their shoulders. Thousands attempted to flee. Physicians and lawyers were prevented from practicing. Jewish stores were plundered. Jews were beaten and arrested. The Jewish residential districts were in panic.

New restrictive measures against Jews were being formed.

The Austrian Evangelical Church was made a section of the German Evangelical Church. Its head telegraphed Hitler greetings from 330,000 members and hailed him as "our rescuer."

German Heads Guards.

German officials who came with Hitler began shaping Austrian affairs to the Nazi pattern.

The first order of Heinrich Himmler, chief of all German police, was to elevate black shirt Austrian shutz-staffel guards, "which were forbidden through illegal measures of the previous administration," to be a national organization.

Viktor Lutze, chief of German brown shirt S. A. guards, was named head of the Austrian S. A. division.

Baron Karl von Werkman, Emperor Karl's last secretary and a prominent leader of the now liquidated monarchist movement, was reported to be dying of bullet wounds.

"Resister" Is Shot.

He had been confined under heavy guard since Friday in the monarchist headquarters. He was said to have resisted when blackshirt Nazi troopers came to take him to their headquarters for questioning. One version said he threatened them with a pistol, another that he shot himself.

Properties of the Hapsburgs—whose hope of returning to the vacant Austrian throne were gone—were expected to be confiscated as homes and training camps for the Hitler youth.

Customs buildings on the German border, now only reminders of Austria's lost sovereignty, also will be converted into youth hostels.

Baldur von Schirach, German Hitler youth leader, already was busy organizing the Austrian Hitler youth movement. He told them he had taken over the buildings of the "so-called leadership of the Austrian Jungvolk" and announced that 21 Austrian youths killed in the Nazi struggle for power would be considered heroes of the movement.

It was announced complete retribution would be made to all Nazis who suffered physical injury, property losses, loss of employment or pension in the struggle.

Nazi historians started work to preserve records of recent developments for posterity. Bureaus were opened to which Austrians were asked to take pictures, handbills and other material.

Press Purge Complete.

Membership campaigns started for a Hitlerite women's charitable organization.

New Nazi editors were on the job. Newspapers published large swastikas from their mastheads. The press purge, apparently planned in advance, was almost complete.

German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and Franz von Papen, former German ambassador to Vienna, who helped prepare the Austrian coup, arrived by plane.

Hitler named Joseph Buerckel, Nazi executive who organized the Saar after its return to Germany in 1934, to reorganize Austrian Nazis and prepare for the plebiscite, April 10, in which Austria will vote on union.

Decrees prohibited withdrawals of more than 1,000 schillings ($180) from savings accounts within the coming week.

Throughout the country new officials took charge and new organizations sprang up parallel to those in Germany with which Austria—yesterday sovereign and independent—today was one.

League Bankers Defer Talk on Austrian Debts

Basel, Switzerland, March 14 (AP). Directors of the Bank of International Settlements discussed briefly today the future of two loans made to Austria by the League of Nations totaling about $150,000,000.

A spokesman said the board agreed Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler "had more important things to think of at present" and deferred further discussion.

Nazi Note Says Britain Has No Austrian Rights

Neurath Warns of 'Danger' in Interference by Third Power.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 14.—Following is an abridged text of the letter from Baron Konstantin von Neurath, head of the German secret foreign affairs council, replying to a British protest against the Austrian coup:

After recalling information on which Ambassador Sir Nevile Henderson made the protest, von Neurath wrote:

"In the name of the German government I must state in reply that the British government is not within its rights in claiming the role of protector of the independence of Austria.

Protest Rejected.

"In the course of diplomatic conversations regarding the Austrian question, the German government have never left the British government in doubt that the form of relations between the Reich and Austria can only be regarded as an internal affair of the German people, which is no concern to a third power.

"For this reason the German government must from the outset reject as inadmissible the protest lodged by the British government even though it was only conditional."

Outlining events of the last week, the letter continued:

"If the Berchtesgaden agreement had been loyally carried out on the Austrian side in the spirit of the conversation of February 12 (the Berchtesgaden conference of Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg), it would in fact have guaranteed peaceful development.

Ultimatum Held "Imagination."

"Instead of this Schuschnigg announced on his sole responsibility a plebiscite intended to have, as it could only have, as its purpose political repression of an overwhelming majority of the population of Austria.

"This led to an extremely critical development in the internal situation of Austria. In consequence there ensued a cabinet crisis in Vienna, leading to formation of a new government. It is not true that forcible pressure on the course of these developments was exercised by the Reich."

Von Neurath termed as "pure imagination" an "allegation that an ultimatum was presented demanding a federal change in accordance with a list of certain proposed candidates in conformity with proposals of the German government, failing which entry of German troops would have to be contemplated."

Warns of "Consequences."

The letter said the question of dispatching German forces was first raised by Austrian request.

"Faced with the directly threatening danger of bloody civil war in Austria the government of the Reich decided to meet the appeal."

The letter concluded with the contention that "dangerous consequences could only come into play if an attempt should be made by a third party, in contradiction of the peaceful intentions and legitimate aims of the Reich, to exercise on developments of the situation in Austria an influence inconsistent with the right of the German people to self-determination."

would be wardens who would be trained in instructing the public on protection for attacks.

They also would take part in street patrols, man ambulances, do rescue and repair work and fight fire in emergency.

As Chamberlain spoke, strong detachments of mounted and foot police dispersed 1,000 demonstrators outside the House of Commons.

The crowd was demonstrating against Germany and Chamberlain.

Chamberlain, who only recently reaffirmed a pledge by Lord Baldwin, when he was Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, against conscription in peace-time, told the House:

"We must consider the new situation clearly, but with cool judgment and with confidence that we shall be supported in asking that no one, whatever his particular preconceived notions may be, shall regard himself as excluded from any extension of national efforts that may be called for."

He confessed to the hushed but seething Commons that Germany's absorption of Austria had struck a deadly blow at his newly chosen policy of trying to satisfy the dictator states through peaceful negotiations.

Czech Pledge Demanded.

His statement, paraleled by one in the House of Lords by Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax, followed a special cabinet meeting.

Quickly the opposition took up a demand for what the prime minister had failed specifically to give—a pledge for Czechoslovakia.

"Let us resolve to support France in respect of Czechoslovakia," shouted Sir Archibald Sinclair, opposition Liberal leader.

Clement Attlee, Laborite leader, pointing out Germany's absorption of Austria came at the very time Britain was holding conversations with the German government, declared:

"It seems to me this event knocks down the house of cards on which the premier has been building."

Former Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, who resigned in a break with Chamberlain over his policy, "is shown to be right," the Laborite said.

"Each successive incident of bad faith and breach of treaty and each successful aggression leads to another."

There were cheers when L. S. Amery, Conservative, urged:

"Let us let France, Czechoslovakia and Germany in plain language know that the first German soldier or airplane that crosses the Czech border will have the whole might of this country against it."

Winston Churchill, former Cabinet minister, declared the gravity of the situation could not be exaggerated and said:

"A wedge has been driven into the heart of the Little Entente." (Rumania, Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia are the Little Entente countries.)

While Chamberlain refrained from a Czechoslovakian pledge, he did, however, promise that "His Majesty's government are and must always be interested in developments in central Europe."

He expressed "severe condemnation" of Germany's step in Austria.

This came after he disclosed that Baron Konstantin von Neurath, chairman of Germany's new secret council, had rejected British protests in a letter, saying the British government was not within its right in claiming "the role of protector of the independence of Austria."

Assails Italy's Silence.

The prime minister painted a dark picture of what political and economic consequences might follow Hitler's Austrian blow.

And he did not spare Premier Mussolini of Italy—the man whose quick friendship he chose to seek instead of keeping Eden.

He said:

"From the Italian government we have received no full exposition of their views. . . ."

In the House of Commons, an "all party" resolution backed by a number of government supporters as well as Liberals and Laborites was presented asking Britain to assure France of her support if "the French were called to the assistance of Czechoslovakia against any act of unprovoked aggression."

Clement Attlee, Laborite leader, pointing out Germany's absorption of Austria came at the very time Britain was holding conversations with the German government, declared:

Richard Butler, Parliamentary undersecretary for foreign affairs, who ended the Commons' 7-hour debate, disclosed Britain had made further representations to Germany "on the subject of Austrian and German forces being amalgamated."

He said "we have received reports the German army would be withdrawn after a certain period and when normalcy has been restored.

"We have received assurances every effort will be used to insure a sense of moderation in the treatment of Catholics, Jews and Socialists."

He said it was impossible for words to express "how solemnly" the British government feels on the questions of withdrawal of German troops from Austria and the position of the Catholics, Jews and Socialists.

Franco Troops Drive to Within 45 Miles of Sea

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France (on the Spanish Frontier), March 14.—The massed power of the insurgents' eastern offensive tore through government defenses today, carrying Gen. Franco's troops within 45 miles of the Mediterranean.

The important city of Alcaniz fell before the insurgent march toward Catalonia and the sea, aimed at splitting loyalist Spain in two.

The government war ministry at Barcelona confirmed insurgent capture of Alcaniz, which gave the insurgents control of a network of highways linking the seacoast and the province of Tarragona with Teruel and Zaragoza, now insurgent-held territory.

"On to the sea," Franco's troops cried as they swept beyond Alcaniz, driving to isolate Catalonia to the north and Valencia and Madrid as a southern unit.

Insurgent headquarters at Salamanca said Franco's troops, since first day of the offensive, March 9, had found the only barriers to their progress were geographic, as government troops retreated.

Insurgents captured the entire line between Alcaniz and Caspe, which early government dispatches described as the last government bulwark before Catalonia, of which Barcelona is the capital.

Nazi Planes Counted.

The government asserted 45 German planes took part in the drive as well as German antiaircraft and field guns manned by officers and artillery crews "coming from the Reich army."

Eight Italian planes were said by the government to have been shot down in the day's action on the eastern Aragon front.

Austria Envoy Here Is Placed Under German

Legation Staff Put at Dieckhoff's Disposal; Liquidation Expected.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Austria's legation and diplomatic representatives within a few days will disappear from Washington's diplomatic rosters, perhaps for all time, as a result of Adolph Hitler's week-end coup d'etat, it was indicated last night.

German Ambassador Hans Dieckhoff late yesterday presented to Secretary of State Cordell Hull a note informing this Government that Austrian diplomatic representatives had been instructed to place themselves and their personnel at the disposition of the German representatives.

This was taken to mean that the Austrian legation at 2343 Massachusetts avenue would immediately be closed and that in all probability Austrian Minister Edgar L. G. Prochnik would be retired. But this was not confirmed. State Department attaches confirmed Dieckhoff's visit but said Secretary Hull had left immediately after the visit and that the Ambassador's note, written in German, had not yet been translated.

His Second "Liquidation."

German assumption of the Austrian Legation's functions here came as no surprise to Minister Prochnik. He expected the action earlier in the day and asserted it would be the second liquidation for him as a diplomat. He recalled that 18 years ago he liquidated the old Austro-Hungarian Embassy here, distributing the archives to the successor states of that empire—Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Hungary, Italy and Rumania.

Pending clarification of the events of the week-end in Austria, Secretary Hull and his aides withheld announcement of what course this Government would follow but it was generally expected that the United States would abandon its legation in Vienna, establishing a consulate-general in its place with John C. Wiley, the present charge d'affaires there, as consul general. A demand by this Government that Germany assume responsibility for Austria's indebtedness to this country also was regarded as certain.

Meanwhile, Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles heard from Czechoslovakian Minister Vladimir Hurban that his country would resist by fighting any attempted German invasion. Leaving Welles' office after a 20-minute conference, Hurban asserted that "we have a policy—it is to resist with force any invasion of Czechoslovakian territory."

French Aid Expected.

Asked if Czechoslovakia expected French help in the event of a German invasion, Col. Hurban replied in the affirmative.

Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador, also called at the State Department during the afternoon. He first called on Adolph A. Berle, new Assistant Secretary of State. That call was described as a courtesy visit—to get acquainted with the new official. Later the British Ambassador went to Welles' office and was there several minutes. No clue was given to the nature of that conversation, although it was presumed Lindsay and Welles exchanged information and views about Austria.

Count Jerzy Potocki, Polish Ambassador to the United States, called on President Roosevelt yesterday. The announced purpose of the visit was to present to Mr. Roosevelt a facsimile of a new Polish stamp to be issued Thursday commemorating the 150th anniversary of the American Constitution.

But the President and Polish Ambassador discussed the Austrian situation. Potocki, on leaving the White House, said the subject had been discussed "generally," but he could "not help it, unfortunately."

Still another problem resulting from the Hitler coup was the treatment in the future of imports from Austria. Hitherto that country enjoyed most-favored-nation tariff treatment from this country, getting all the benefits of reductions in duties made under reciprocal trade agreements.

Trade "Black List" Probable.

Germany, due to its nationalistic trade policies and its discrimination against United States commodities, has been on the American tariff "black list," that is, tariff reductions given to other countries in reciprocal trade agreements were denied to Germany. In the future in all probability goods from what was Austria will be treated in this fashion.

Secretary Hull brought smiles to the faces of the members of his press conference at noon yesterday when he marched into the room and solemnly asserted, without prompting, that he did not believe there were any new developments in the Far Eastern situation. A few weeks ago the minds of all State Department correspondents were concentrated on the Far East. Yesterday they thought of nothing but the Austrian developments. But Hull could not be persuaded to talk about that situation, asserting that, pending developments, it would be safer for him not to indicate what might happen.

The News-Chronicle quoted the official Polish spokesman:

"The present state of affairs cannot and will not be tolerated any longer."

greatest European upheavals since the World War.

But opposition developed in financial, political and diplomatic quarters.

The franc sagged to a new low compared with the dollar and pound as a result of what financial quarters called Blum's "half-hearted" assurances there would be no exchange control and their fear that his government could not last.

The franc was quoted at 32.50 to the dollar (3.07 cents) at the course closing.

Political observers said most members of France's conservative senate were bitterly opposed to the cabinet. They regarded a national union government—of all parties—essential and believed only Edouard Daladier, minister of war and defense, or Edouard Herriot, president of the chamber of deputies, could form one.

Austria Coup Accepted.

Blum, himself, made clear that his was only a transition ministry and that he hoped to evolve a national union government with conservative support.

Diplomatically, opposition rose against the choice of Joseph Paul-Boncour as foreign minister. Critics feared his known anti-Italian views might undermine French support of Italian-British friendship talks.

The nonexistence of Austria except as a state within the German nation was accepted as accomplished and irrevocable.

But France was determined not to stand idly by and see Czechoslovakia, her main central European ally, yield to nazification.

After the meeting with Osusky, the premier announced the government had summoned the French ministers in Brussels, Prague and Vienna to Paris to confer.

French officials said they viewed the course of debate in the British House of Commons as an indication Britain had moved toward France's stand for action in case Czechoslovakia were attacked, although Prime Minister Chamberlain would not "shout too loudly" until armaments were increased.

Army sources declared France's fighting machine would be ready for any emergency, with or without a government.

To Bar Further Change.

The permanent staff of the foreign office reiterated France was prepared to act against any further change in Europe's map.

Blum summoned his cabinet to meet tomorrow and was expected to face his council and Parliament Thursday with a declaration of policy.

Secret numbers of French troops manned the concrete-and-steel Maginot line which stretches virtually from Switzerland to Belgium along the German frontier.

A source close to authority said France sought an understanding with Britain that the two democracies "tolerate no more violations of European order."

France would help Prague against Germany even if Hitler should attempt peaceful nazification of Czechoslovakia. She would seek to extend her mutual assistance understanding with Czechoslovakia to all central Europe, Poland, Rumania and Yugoslavia.

Eventually, there would be an effort to break the Rome-Berlin axis, if present Italian-British negotiations are successful, to bring Italy into the French-British front.

Restaurant Help In U. S. Buildings To Get More Pay

Cafeteria and restaurant employes in Government buildings will receive wage increases totaling $35,000 a year as a result of the recent D. C. Minimum Wage Board order, it was announced yesterday by trustees of the Welfare and Recreation Association, which operates restaurants in Federal buildings.

Employes who work 48 hours a week will receive $18 rather than $16.50, the minimum set by the wage board. Many full-time workers who already receive more than the minimum will receive additional compensation, either in pay or in decreased working hours, the trustees announced.

The higher scale will be effective April 1. The association said an effort would be made at once to reduce maximum hours to 48 a week.

According to yesterday's announcement, the association will ignore the lower wage classification for vegetable girls and dishwashers, including all workers in the higher wage group.

Hearst Is Seen Ready to Sell 6 Radio Stations

Broadcasting Chain Headed by Elliott Roosevelt May Be Split Up.

Plans for the sale of at least six of the ten radio stations owned by William Randolph Hearst, the publisher, were reported in informed quarters here yesterday. Federal Communications Commission officials said they had received no official word of such negotiations, but unofficially it was said that the radio broadcasting chain, headed by Elliott Roosevelt, son of the President, would be broken up soon.

Joseph V. Connelly, chairman of the board of Hearst radio, is stated to be active with Elliott Roosevelt in the deal. The magazine Broadcasting, published yesterday, outlined reported details of the future transactions.

Four of the six stations mentioned—Koma, at Oklahoma City, KTSA, at San Antonio, Waco at Waco, Texas and KNOW at Austin, with the two affiliated corporations, International Radio Sales and International Radio productions, were reported to be slated for sale to a group of business men. A two-weeks option, dated March 10, was said to have been taken by the group on the properties for $300,000. A seventh station, WBAL at Baltimore, also is reported to be for sale.

The Hearst station in New York, WINS, was reported for sale to Arthur O'Brien, of Seattle, a former Democratic National Committeemen from Washington, for about $250,000 as a personal venture. Earl C. Anthony, owner of station KFI, was said to have agreed to pay $400,000 for the Hearst station KEHE at Los Angeles with a view of reselling it to other California interests.

February Building $119,038,000 in East

New York, March 14.—Contracts awarded for building and engineering work in the 37 Eastern States during the month of February amounted to $119,038,000, according to F. W. Dodge Corporation. This was a decline of 37 per cent from February, 1937, and followed a drop in January of 20 per cent from January of last year.

Residential building undertaken in the 37 Eastern States rose 10 per cent during February, 1938, as compared with the preceding month. This gain represents the first break in the series of successive monthly declines for residential building which began last June. Residential contracts for February totaled $40,023,000.

Supreme Court Rejects Attack On Salute Law

Declines to Interfere With New Jersey School Regulation.

By the Associated Press.

The Supreme Court yesterday refused to interfere with efforts of the State of New Jersey to require all school pupils to salute the American flag. An attack by two children on constitutionality of a law requiring the salute was dismissed on the ground that no "substantial Federal question" was involved.

The children—Alma Hering and Vivian Hering—said they were expelled from the Lincoln Public School of Secaucus, N. J., on November 1, 1935, for refusal to salute the flag or take a pledge of allegiance to it.

Claim Freedom Denied.

They explained they were members of a religious organization which prohibited such action. The New Jersey law "unreasonably restricts" their "freedom of religious belief and worship," they contended.

The court also refused to interfere with a lower court decision that Al Capone must serve a year in the Cook County (Chicago) Jail when he is released from Alcatraz Penitentiary. Capone was convicted of income-tax evasion and sentenced to serve ten years in a Federal penitentiary and one in the jail.

The court refused to reconsider its decision that provisions of a South Carolina law limiting the gross weight of trucks to 20,000 pounds and the width to 90 incnes could be applied to vehicles operating in interstate commerce on standard concrete or asphalt highways.

Habeas Corpus Opposed.

Attorney General Cary D. Landis of Florida asked the court to refuse to permit the filing of a petition for a writ of habeas corpus by Albert R. House, now serving a 70-year Florida prison term for burglary and robbery.

House, whose home is in Terre Haute, Ind., was convicted in Hillsborough County, Fla., in 1925. In his appeal he contended he was "ignorant of his legal rights" when he entered guilty pleas, and that evidence against him "was obtained by search and seizure in violation of his right under the fourth amendment to the Constitution."

ending one of the longest inquests on record. It was the first time in the memory of Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald that two juries have failed to agree.

In reporting the deadlock the jury held that Keys was slain by bullets from a gun "held in the hand or hands of John W. Nally."

"But after due deliberation," the panel announced, "we are unable to agree on the guilt or innocence of Policeman Nally."

Dr. MacDonald then authorized all the evidence to be turned over to the District attorney's office. He released Nally from custody of the coroner and Prosecutor Robb ordered the man arrested.

The jury of two colored and four white men was given the case at 1:01 a. m. Sunday after two days and nights of testimony. The panel was excused from deliberations nearly two hours later and resumed again at 10 a. m. yesterday.

First indication that the jurors failed to agree on points of evidence came during yesterday's deliberations when they requested permission to visit the shooting scene at 2470 Ontario road northwest.

Accompanied by Dr. MacDonald and a police escort, they went to the house and spent more than an hour surveying the room where Keys was killed and various locations from which witnesses reported watching his encounter with police.

After visiting an alley at the rear of Keys' home and examining carefully several bullet holes in the walls and window sash of a downstairs room, the jury returned to the morgue and continued its discussions. The deadlock was announced a short time later.

Robb said Nally's prosecution would be conducted in the "usual manner," and all witnesses—nearly 20—would be summoned to appear before the grand jury.

The inquest brought charges that authorities were attempting to "whitewash" Keys' death. It was contended that police failed to use available means of forcing the crazed colored man from his barricaded room before resorting to gunfire.

Evidence was presented showing that police cars responding to a trouble call at the Keys home were equipped with tear gas, but that officers failed to use it.

Several colored civic and veteran groups claimed police did not exercise prudent judgment and could have subdued the enraged man without shooting him.

Keys, former patient at St. Elizabeths Hospital and a veteran of the World War, was killed last Tuesday following an hour's battle with police from two precincts.

The demented man, brandishing knives, hurled tools, books and furnishings of his room at the officers and finally set fire to draperies before a bullet through his chest ended the battle.

Nally and Policeman Robert M. Henry, Third Precinct, admitted firing two shots each into the house. Ballistics tests disclosed that it was Nally's shot which took effect.

Grayson Leaves Entire Estate of $350,000 to Widow

Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the American Red Cross and physician to four Presidents, left his $350,000 estate to his widow, Mrs. Gertrude Gordon Grayson. His will was filed for probate in District Court yesterday.

The real estate included the admiral's home, Highlands, at 3825 Wisconsin avenue northwest; a 503-acre farm in Virginia, a small plot in Florida and another small plot in Virginia. Admiral Grayson died February 15.

Mother and Sister Who Gave Girl, 4, Liquor, Fined $100

Mrs. Myrtle Virginia Craig, 23, whose 4-year-old daughter is under treatment at Casualty Hospital for acute alcoholism, and her sister, Elizabeth Martin, 20, were sentenced in Police Court yesterday to pay $100 fine or serve 30 days in jail.

"I'm sorry I can't give you more," said Judge Hobart Newman, imposing the maximum penalty for being drunk and disorderly.

Police who found the child, Barbara Lee Dodson, unconscious when they were summoned to Mrs. Craig's apartment on complaints of neighbors, said Mrs. Craig told them she had given Barbara Lee liquor for a cold. The landlady of the rooming house said she heard Barbara Lee scream and thought she was being beaten. Mrs. Craig denied this.

According to Capt. Rhoda J. Milliken, head of the women's bureau, the little girl previously had been placed with her by paternal relatives with Mrs. Craig's consent but that the mother changed her mind and took the child back.

Darrow's Coffin Bare of Flowers

Chicago, March 14 (AP).—Hundreds of admirers of Clarence Darrow filed by his bier today. His body lay in a coffin unadorned by flowers.

Tomorrow the body of the famed lawyer, who died Sunday of a heart ailment, will be removed to Bond Chapel on the campus of the University of Chicago.

There it will lie in state from noon until 2 p. m., when memorial services will be held. The only speaker will be Federal Judge William H. Holly, Darrow's former law partner. Cremation in Oakwood Cemetery will follow.

Crop Insurance Offices.

The Federal crop program for wheat will be instituted with branch office headquarters in only two cities at the outset, it was announced yesterday by the board of directors of the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation. These cities are Kansas City, Mo., and Minneapolis.

Keep The Ball Rolling.

The hearings begun yesterday on the new zoning bill for the District mark the first legislative step toward reorganization of the local government. Modernization of the basic zoning act passed in 1912 was one of the recommendations of the Prettyman committee. While this is not the most significant bill in the reorganization program, it may nevertheless serve as a test of Congressional interest in overhauling obsolete governmental machinery here.

Nothing has been heard as to the remainder of the reorganization program since the Commissioners analyzed the Prettyman report several weeks ago and indicated that some of the recommendations will have their support. It is understood, however, that a report to Congress may be ready this week. In the meantime Corporation Counsel Seal is busy drafting various bills in accord with the Commissioners' instructions.

The plan of drafting these bills for separate consideration is sound, as indicated by the confusion surrounding the Senate's omnibus measure for reorganization of the Federal Government. As now planned each bill will stand on its own merits. And the District will not risk defeat of its entire plan because opposition to one proposed change may develop. Nevertheless, it is desirable to have each bill considered as part of a larger program so that the general objective will not be lost to sight.

Considerable time is required to prepare bills of this kind. The load upon the Corporation Counsel's office is particularly great at present because the local tax bill is still under consideration and Mr. Seal has never been granted the legislative assistant he has so frequently requested. Yet the desirability of placing the reorganization measures before Congressional committees at the earliest possible moment is readily apparent.

Legislation of this sort usually moves through Congress slowly. Since an early adjournment is planned this year, the reorganization plan may be once more laid aside unless hearings on the more significant bills can begin in the near future. With another year's delay the impetus of the Prettyman committee report might be lost and the struggle for modernization of the District government might have to begin all over again.

Clarence Darrow.

Clarence Darrow has gone to join Bob Ingersoll in that putative void both argued so eloquently to be life's only aftermath. The country may yet produce minds as incisive and tongues as persuasive but it is doubtful whether "liberals" of quite the same homespun variety or popular appeal will result. Twentieth century America, closely packed and tightly knit, necessarily thinks in terms of groups. It is the plight of the "underprivileged third" and the rights of whole labor units, rather than the fate of one McNamara, that concern men of high social conscience today.

In his time, however, Clarence Darrow was the quintessence of America. Born in Ohio, then the seed-bed of the Nation's most characteristic stock, he grew up on a farm, as did most of his contemporaries. His education was largely self-administered and, true to tradition, it raised him to a high position in the ranks of his profession. Out of this success grew a belief in conservative action from which no amount of later impulses to rebellion could shake him. His early-won sense of self-sufficiency, too, served to insulate him effectively from insistent appeals of Socialism and other non-individualistic philosophies.

Where Darrow transcended the picture of the successful American of his era was in his unquenchable enthusiasm for "lost" causes, particularly where human values were involved. To be sure cynics occasionally suggested that his apparently profound interest in the underdog and his readiness to plead the case of unpopular individuals caught in the meshes of the law were dictated by the rewards entailed. In the light of his unpretentious way of life, however, it seems more reasonable to believe him to have been sincere in his fervent antipathy for capital punishment and his concern for the oppressed and persecuted generally. He has been described as one who was cynical about human nature but still loved his fellowman. This in itself is a fitting epitaph for Clarence Darrow. America is poorer by his passing.

The New Reich.

Now that Austria has been formally incorporated in the Third Reich the question of how much Germany has gained thereby, in tangible material strength, becomes of paramount importance. The magnitude of Hitler's triumph from an emotional and sentimental viewpoint is obvious. But the extent to which it will fortify the National Socialist economy is another matter.

The issue is not disposed of by noting that the Reich has overnight increased its population by some 7,000,000 people and its territory by 32,377 square miles. Certainly these additions give Germany additional manpower, and extension of political influence. But additional population and area may also prove a handicap, if they mean a greater strain on national resources or defense considerations in time of war.

By extending her frontiers to the Brenner Pass on the south and to the borders of Hungary on the southeast Germany has certainly improved her strategic position. Austro-German union makes the new Reich impregnable to attack through the mountains which now form its southern border. And it establishes a direct contact with the rich grain fields of Hungary which does something to reduce the fear of starvation under blockade which since 1918 has haunted the German general staff.

That does not, however, throw light on the basic consideration of whether the incorporation of Austria will strengthen that national economy which in the last analysis determines military power. And the first guess of many will be that Germany is in this respect the weaker by reason of Anschluss. Austria since 1919 has been an impoverished and far from self-supporting nation, the argument will run. How can the annexation of this mountainous little republic really increase the economic power of Germany?

If it were true that Austria is wholly deficient in essential resources there would be every reason to assume that, from the long-range viewpoint, Germany has added to her problems rather than her power by last week's coup d'etat. But the fact which needs emphasis, if the significance of current events is to be accurately assessed, is that Austria is by no means lacking in certain basic raw materials which are vital to national strength.

The wealth of Austria's mineral deposits, particularly iron ore, antimony, copper, magnesite, lead, zinc and coal is very considerable, as attested by the fact that one-fifth of the working population is engaged in one form or another of mining and metallurgical operation. In this general classification Austria is more than self-sufficient. Metals and metal manufactures have averaged one-third of her total exports in recent years.

A further important consideration is found in the fact that the mineral wealth of Germany and Austria complement each other to a remarkable extent. Germany, since the war, has been relatively poor in iron ore. In Austria is one of the largest and richest deposits in all Europe. To a lesser extent German insufficiency can be improved by Austrian production of copper and lead. Germany, on the other hand, can, from her surplus, easily supplement Austrian deficiencies in coal, nitrates and potash.

In agricultural products Austria is even less self-sufficing than Germany. The timber in which she is so rich does not compensate for the heavy imports of foodstuffs which are required. And this lack Germany, unable to feed her own population, is in no position to make up. Here is the Achilles heel of the new Reich. In its inevitable reliance, now augmented, on imported foodstuffs lies its chief reason for walking softly, now that it has so dramatically extended its borders.

But on balance it is evident that the Austro-German union creates a stronger and not a weaker Reich. When the economic advantages of railroad amalgamation, customs elimination and efficient centralized direction are added up, no far-sighted statesman would base his calculations on Germany being more amenable to outside pressures as a result of what has transpired. Palatable or not that is the fact with which the neighbors of the Nazi have to reckon in the uncertain days which lie ahead. That is the fact which Hitler had in mind when he told the Viennese, yesterday, that: "The German Reich as it stands today is inviolable. No one can shatter it!"

Recording The Echo.

Because of the international tension over the week-end the United States first referendum on compulsory regulation of crops under the new AAA was almost lost to sight. The application of drastic marketing quotas on American farms is not nearly so dramatic as the Nazi seizure of Austria. Yet the referendums conducted by the AAA among cotton and tobacco growers are not dissimilar to the plebiscite by which Austria's fate will theoretically be decided.

Hitler seized Austria to forestall a referendum that might have shown a majority in favor of continued independence for that land. He was not willing to let the people express any view on the subject until the decision had been taken for them. The plebiscite scheduled for April 10 will doubtless be only a popular echo of the dictatorial voice which now speaks with authority in Vienna.

Of course, no force was used in the AAA referendums. Nevertheless, farmers were confronted by a fait accompli, just as were the citizens of Austria. In accord with the new farm act Secretary Wallace had proclaimed quotas for cotton and tobacco farms. Farmers had to approve compulsory enforcement of this quota arrangement or forego commodity loans on their 1938 crops. With the exception of one year, the Government has made commodity loans on cotton each season since 1929. When farmers have to choose between compulsory quotas and discontinuation of a loan policy on which they have come to be dependent it can scarcely be said that a free choice is before them.

A high percentage of the farmers voting in each case favors the control program. But many did not take the trouble to go to the polls. It is estimated that about 65 per cent of the eligible cotton growers cast ballots. The final returns may show a majority of all growers in favor of penalties for non-co-operators. Nevertheless, these growers constitute a very small percentage of the entire voting population. In the case of dark tobacco, the question of applying the quotas to the 1938 crop will probably be decided by not more than 50,000 persons in four States. The vast number of consumers whose interests are directly affected by the new farm policy have no voice whatever in these decisions.

As a practical matter, however, these referendums have little significance for either the participants or those who are denied participation. Actually, the Nation's agricultural policy is now fixed in Washington and farmers have to fall into line or suffer the consequences. Only in the case of a flagrant abuse of power would the referendum check be likely to prove useful. This device gives Secretary Wallace an opportunity to laud the democracy of the farm act, but voting under pressure does not change the inevitably dictatorial nature of a collectivist system.

Blum Takes The Helm.

Camille Chautemps resigned as premier of France on Thursday. It was not until Sunday that Leon Blum finally succeeded in forming a new government.

To be sure Blum did his best to bring into immediate existence that broad-based government of national union which the present situation so desperately demands. But he failed. Despite the most serious international crisis since 1914, French politicians would not stop their partisan bickerings.

They fiddled while Rome burned or, more literally, while Austria disappeared from the map. And when Blum finally resolved the crisis he did it by reconstituting, with altered personnel, his own government of 1936. Again Socialists and Radical Socialists are sharing power, with the Communists outside the government but backing it.

It may be that Hitler's coup in Austria has united the French nation if not the French Parliament. It may be that in pursuing a vigorous course of action Blum will meet with a large measure of popular support. The appointment of Paul-Boncour as foreign minister in the place of Yvon Delbos suggests a more independent policy, one less subservient to Great Britain than that pursued during the past two years. More active support of the hard-pressed Barcelona government may also follow the change in France. And Blum, like Chautemps before him, has already taken occasion to emphasize French determination to honor all the pledges embodied in the Franco-Czechoslovak treaty of alliance.

In the last analysis, however, Blum's principal task will be that of his predecessors. None of them managed with any large measure of success to clean the Augean stables of deficit financing. The new Premier has recognized the importance of this problem by himself assuming the finance post. But whether he will succeed better than in his last administration is dubious, to say the least.

In this connection it is noteworthy that Georges Bonnet is not included in the present government. Of all recent finance ministers Bonnet showed the clearest understanding of the drastic measures and the greatest determination into putting these measures into effect. Yet Blum in his first time as Premier also revealed high qualities of courage and statesmanship. None knows better than he the seriousness of the situation which confronts France internally and externally.

The latest French cabinet crisis rendered France and the cause of democracy a great disservice. The four days of confusion at Paris were in glaring contrast with the brutal directness and dispatch which Hitler displayed in liquidating the Austrian problem once and for all. Unless the French and other democratic peoples can re-form their lines, forget their differences and learn to act with strength, intelligence and determination, last week's developments in Austria may mark the beginning rather than the end of a new cycle of fundamental changes in crisis-ridden Europe.

Guilt At Moscow.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: During the recent trial of 21 Communists in Soviet Russia, what the Soviet government wants to have believed, in brief, is this:

Trotzky, by means of his agents in Soviet Russia, of whom 21 were on trial, has been able to have acts of terrorism and sabotage performed all over Russia. In fact, Trotzky, through the direct agency of Yagoda, chief of the secret political police in Russia (GPU, OGPU) from 1920 to 1936, is chiefly responsible for the reign of terror in Russia.

The reference is inescapable. If Yagoda was responsible for the cruelty and bloodshed in Russia since 1920, then, with his arrest, cruelty and bloodshed must cease.

But, during the very trial of Yagoda one of his co-prisoners, Krestinsky, recanted a previously signed confession. The next day he again confessed, a visibly broken man. Was it a night of moral struggle with his conscience that forced Krestinsky to reconfess? Surely, it could not have been physical coercion. It was Yagoda who closed doors on his victims' thumbs until they agreed to everything suggested to them, and since Yagoda was safely in prison, such tactics surely could not have been used on Krestinsky. The reign of terror is over, yet Krestinsky appears in the witness box with the evidence of torture clearly visible on his features. The reign of terror is over, yet 21 men make confessions which are their death warrants with the ease and fluency of long practice.

Was it social conscience that made these 21 men seek death, or was it fear of cruel, barbaric torture?

Wrong About China.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is one picture on my desk which I shall always keep. It shows beauty of character. It is of Mme. Chiang Kai-shek. I have been wondering why she relinquished control of the Chinese air forces. I have just found out. She comes from a Christian family, and is a Christian herself, as is her husband. The Chinese planned to bomb defenseless cities of Japan, which would include women and children, and she would have nothing to do with it! History will never be ashamed of her name!

Another story: A Japanese soldier, who had been bombing Chinese women and children, was suddenly attacked with appendicitis. He was afraid to go to the only hospital—Chinese! He was informed that the Chinese surgeon there would care for him, so he went with fear. The Chinese surgeon operated upon him and saved his life. He became a Christian—no more bombing for him!

"Therefore if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink: for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head." That was written by a man who was also suddenly changed—St. Paul.

I had thought God has deserted China, but He is there in His people! I am wrong.

Pershing's Courtesy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While the papers are full of news of Gen. Pershing an anecdote of his extreme courtesy to the women who served his soldiers overseas may not come amiss. This incident happened in Chaumont, France.

A small group of Y. M. C. A. women were standing together watching the men drill. When the maneuvers were over and we were about to leave, I saw Gen. Pershing coming across the field in our direction. To our great surprise he walked over to us and shook hands with us all and thanked us for being there and assured us that our very presence in France helped greatly in keeping up the morale of the American soldiers.

"They feel," he said, "that you represent their own womenfolk at home."

Playground Solution?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At last and at last I have the solution for the recreational difficulties in the District of Columbia. Give Miss Sybil Baker a probational appointment as head of the Community Center and let her take with her any outstanding teachers she thinks she has in her department, also making their appointments probational and thereby abolishing the entire playgrounds department under the Commissioners.

Then ask Mr. Finnan as a gentleman if he would step out of the picture as far as the smaller parks are concerned. His department is honestly trying to serve the public, but the supervision of play of school children properly belongs under the Board of Education.

Perhaps we could thus have the playgrounds, school and others, open and properly supervised at all needed times. And also perhaps we could then have a public meeting without having to listen to one of the several people involved talk, talk, talk, with the playgrounds closed while they talk.

When my youngster started kindergarten they were talking. He is almost ready for senior high and they are still talking.

Hoover's Reception.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: During Woodrow Wilson's Administration, Herbert Hoover was appointed food administrator with a handsome salary and traveling expenses paid by the United States Government. It was in compliance with the duties of this office that Mr. Hoover had the good fortune of having a trip abroad to distribute food that was provided by the people of the United States to alleviate hunger in foreign nations. Belgium, being the country in greatest need, received more per capita than others.

These being the circumstances, why all the fuss by the Belgians over the visit of the one who was paid merely to distribute food that was given by the American people and not by any individual?

Maryland Flogging.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On March 1 in Baltimore, Md., civilization made a bow to the darkest days of the Dark Ages. The groans of a man whipped for wife-beating were the sounds of medievalism re-entering the world.

Nature will heal the bruises of the wife beater, but no power on earth can cure the cancer which this episode indicates to be feeding on modern civilization—man's innate savagery.

HOWARD CARWILE.

Russian History.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In his letter in The Post of March 12 Mr. Smith W. Brookhart criticizes Father Walsh and praises the Soviet government. But he commits a fundamental error, common to many Soviet apologists, in stating that the Bolsheviks "destroyed the most vicious autocracy of modern times," meaning, of course, the imperial regime.

The truth is that the Bolsheviks overthrew a liberal government headed by the Socialist Kerensky, who came into power following the March, 1917, revolution which ended the existence of the Russian Empire. In this revolution the Bolsheviks had no participation and it came as a complete surprise to them as recorded in Lenin's own writings.

Civil Service Commission.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A substitution of a single head for the existing board of three Civil Service Commissioners, as proposed in President Roosevelt's plan of reorganization, has evoked wide discussion in Congress and throughout the country. Walter White, the executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, has recently wired President Roosevelt urging the retention of the present setup. His chief objective is to secure fair play and justice for the colored applicants who complain of race discrimination in the civil-service administration. Mr. White fails to explain, however, just how the retention of the present board of three commissioners, under which this discrimination now flourishes, could be relied upon to eliminate the evil complained of.

Efficient administration requires definite location of authority and is always weakened by distributed jurisdiction. Wherever the duties imposed are of an executive rather than a judicial character, one executive head has proved to be more efficient and satisfactory. The Government by commission is generally condemned as being wasteful and inefficient. No one would think of suggesting a three-headed commission for the Patent Office or the Bureau of Standards. A commission composed of several members is too apt to become a debating society instead of an executive agency. The existing snarl in the TVA fully illustrates this principle. Napoleon Bonaparte used to say that "one bad ruler is better than two good ones."

When the merit system was established in 1883, its primary purpose was to eliminate the spoils system, which corrupted the public service through political influence. Subsequent experience has failed to justify the faith, at that day, imposed in bipartisan bodies to eliminate political corruption. The purpose of the civil-service act was to establish an agency through which to recruit the public service, on the basis of merit alone, divested of such extraneous influences as politics, race, religion or sex.

Presidents Cleveland and Harrison administered this law faithfully and efficiently through three commissioners. If the Administration is determined to enforce the merit system, it can be done whether under three commissioners or one; but more expeditiously under one than three.

KELLY MILLER.

Washington, March 12.

National Peonage.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The mandatory will, antecedent will, permissive will and contingent will are the four volitional aspects of the body politic. By the mandatory will of the body politic, constitutions, governments and the departments thereof are established. Having created the governmental machinery and agreed to abide by the laws established the body politic is now bound by its antecedent will. At any time in the future the body politic by using the means previously agreed upon may change or abolish the government by its contingent will. Lynching serves to illustrate the operation of the permissive will of the body politic.

The powers to issue and control the supply of money and to levy taxes have been stealthily secured from the body politic and are now being used to enslave it. The first of these powers is in the hands of the super-national banker and the second in the hands of his servants. Like a spider the lord of money has woven a web of erstwhile permanent debts about the state. His idea is to lend the state enormous sums which it must pay back by levying direct and indirect taxes upon the body politic and the entire population. It is like the peonage racket. The population will never get through paying.

The body politic only needs to become conscious of its power and use its contingent will to break this web.

Grandpa At The Fight.

WHILE the Garden crowd roared a booish welcome to the entrance of Slapsie Maxie Baer into the ring, Grandpa snuggled into his ringside seat—in front of the parlor radio.

As was his custom on such occasions, he pulled himself directly before the loudspeaker and in a businesslike manner flipped over the volume control. Grandpa is not at all content with having the radio moderately loud; he has to have it on full blast with the result that everyone within earshot (and that probably includes the neighborhood) hurriedly seeks his bomb-proof shelter.

As the two fighters came out into the center, Grandpa nervously fidgeted with his pipe, blowing out thin blue puffs in untasted succession. As the bell rang for the first round he feigned disinterest while repacking his briar. Then he settled down to some really studious listening.

From the radio poured forth a mellifluous stream of fight jargon and Grandpa sucked in every bit of it. Every time Baer scored a good punch Grandpa's face lighted up. When Farr landed, it became expressionless, much in the fashion of the corner electric sign. Finally the bell clanged and I ventured to ask Grandpa how he liked it.

Nary an answer was forthcoming from the little man. Instead, he just raised his finger in the air and shook his head. When the second round commenced, Grandpa pushed his ear so far into the loudspeaker that I thought the thing must surely give. But it held and so did Tommy Farr until Baer knocked him down to the floor with a left. A sparkle gleamed from Grandpa's eyes but he uttered not a word: he simply puffed a tremendous cloud of smoke ceilingward.

When Baer floored his foe in the next round, Grandpa let go with his vocal cords.

"C'mon, Max, knock him out!" he shouted into the radio, and the fighter tried to oblige but met with negative success. Undaunted nonetheless, Grandpa continued to yell instructions to his man a quarter of a thousand miles away. At length, however, his managerial enthusiasm and the fire in his pipe bowl died out and he swore hotly like you and me.

As the fight progressed and the California battler built up a good advantage, Grandpa's face became shades brighter and he smiled hugely when, between rounds, the announcer said that the fight appeared to be a complete reversal of form. Yep, Max was some fighter when he wanted to fight, Grandpa said.

Then like a bolt from the blue things began to happen—and how! Farr began to take the offensive. "It's Farr with a right to Baer's jaw, a right to the former champ's eye," the fight announcer bawled. "Farr, showing life, crashes a right to Baer's cheek, a left to his eye, and Baer's left eye is beginning to look pretty bad . . ."

Grandpa's face screwed up in perceptible uneasiness. Even the smoke that gushed forth from his live-coal pipe furnace curled away into a defensive gesture.

The broadcaster droned on and Grandpa was all ears. He did not want to miss one consonant of the speaker's rapid-fire oration of the titanic struggle going on in the ring, but unfortunately fight announcers are not Dale Carnegies—or are they? Nevertheless, enough distinct words coursed through the loudspeaker to let Grandpa know that Baer's eye was closed tighter than a peanut and despite the unmonocled eye Mr. Farr was not treating Mr. Baer any too genteelly.

Half arising from his chair, Grandpa fumed and sputtered with righteous indignation into the loudspeaker: "How the hell do they expect a man to fight with one eye? C'mon, Max; show 'em. Keep that left going in there like this . . ." And he launched a terrific haymaker in my direction which I was able to evade by dropping to the floor.

The bell rang for the thirteenth. Grandpa groaned: "Three more to go. If only he can stand up there."

The radio threatened to shake itself loose from its moorings and carry Grandpa's ear along with it when the announcer became excited and blew off: "Baer nearly lifts Farr off floor with a terrific right, a left finds its mark on Farr's jaw. This Baer is amazing . . ." And so it went. The crowd was going crazy, said the man from New York.

Grandpa did imaginary handsprings and Big Apples, and like the sun peeping through a cloud-filled sky, his face beamed. When Baer felled the Welshman in the fourteenth—well, it was almost too much.

At long last the bell sounded and the Baer-Farr fight was history. Giving the radio switch a severe click, Grandpa got up and grinned to me: "Boy! That was a fight. I think Baer is coming back and, do you know, I think he can give Louis a real battle."

Then, after more than a hour of constant listening, Grandpa looked gravely at his wrist watch and with a suddenness that left us dazed he made a dive for the radio, turning on the switch while virtually on the fly. "My goodness," he panted, when body had again been introduced to chair, "I almost missed the news. I want to hear what they have to say about the fight."

Spirit Of Los Angeles.

Los Angeles.

UNLIKE most other American cities, Los Angeles is politically shapeless and as insubstantial as a cloud and has no head man. Affairs, like the notoriously wild and dangerous motor traffic, are conducted by the rule of every man for himself, and the chief of police took it upon himself, without any legal authority, to turn back about 50,000 penniless refugees from the so-called Dust Bowl and got away with it on the ground that this mass immigration of hungry people was a menace to the peace and prosperity of the community. They were described as a cloud of locusts threatening to eat Los Angeles out of house and home, and the fact that they were Americans and subject to no legal immigration restrictions was deemed to be unimportant in the emergency.

PEGLER.

Although the city has no boss comparable to Tom Pendergast in Kansas City nor any government head comparable to LaGuardia in New York, there is a sort of great spirit in the person of Harry Chandler, the president of the Los Angeles Times. Mr. Chandler is 73 years old and is the heir to the authority and traditions of the late Gen. Harrison Gray Otis, who fought union labor to his dying day and made Los Angeles a nonunion town. Mr. Chandler married the daughter of Gen. Otis, and he has been faithful to his late father-in-law's principles.

His own devotion to the old general's cause was strengthened by personal experience in the dynamiting of the Times plant in the fall of 1910. The charge which blew up the building, killing 21 men, was placed beneath his own office in the hope that it would get him, but he had gone home when it went off. Another bomb, placed in the general's home, failed to explode, and the two men who were the personal objects of the plot lived to see the assassins in prison and to exploit the disaster to the detriment of labor organization long after the public had forgotten the explosion.

LOS ANGELES became the refuge of manufacturers and other industrialists who did not want to be bothered by union troubles and grew vastly by contrast with and largely at the expense of San Francisco, where the unions were strong. Mr. Chandler insists that the nonunion shop also appealed to a good grade of workmen who had run foul of union rules, discipline, exactions and rackets in other places and had been harassed or blacklisted and barred from employment.

Los Angeles doubled her population in the decade between 1920 and 1930 and now has about 1,500,000 people in a city which sprawls over vast areas of thinly populated land and includes a great seaport and naval base and farms, oil fields, slums and the Hollywood colony, where the proletariat sit by their swimming pools, sipping drinks and brooding over their thralldom.

Mr. Chandler participated in the plotting of Hollywood as a subdivision in 1903 and recalls that the place was so called by sheer inspiration when he and some others who were arguing over a name saw a boy leading a burro laden with holly, which grew profusely on the land. As a boy of 16 he had come out from New Hampshire for his health and earned a living peddling fruit at first and later delivering newspapers.

• • • •

IT IS HARD to interpret his attitude toward labor organization. The merchants and other business men are organized against labor organizations, but he says he thinks it would be a calamity if the unions were to be destroyed. Yet he refuses to deal with unions and fights them constantly. He pays good wages and gives bonuses and claims to believe that the other employers are high-minded, conscientious men who are better judges of right and more reliable guardians of the workmen's interests than union leaders. There he takes his stand.

The great spirit of Los Angeles, at the age of 73, is a very rich man and is preparing his son, Norman, 39 years old, for the succession. He took over from his father-in-law and carried on in a manner to gratify the soul of the departed leader, but union people cherish a hope that Edsel Ford, when he takes the throne, will modify the old man's policies, and it remains to be seen whether Norman Chandler, in the role of great spirit, will maintain the tradition of super-government from a publisher's office.

She would have said, "Go on, my love, go on!
Head up and facing to the eastern sky—
There is no misery, save missing you,
In having to surrender and to die."

She would have smiled and said, "Oh, why so sad?
Have you not faith . . . the faith that kills despair?
How often have we said, 'Thy will be done,'
Together through the years so sweet and fair?"

She would have said so bravely and so strong,
"What makes you grope so blindly in a daze?
Do you not know I am beside you now
Directing you as ever through the maze?"

• • • •

She would have flung her head back with a laugh—
So seldom did her splendid spirit quail—
And said, "Go on! Go forth with shoulders back . . .
My intercessions for you shall not fail."

She would have had that firm look in her eyes—
Unconquerable of spirit and of heart,
And said, "I want you striding down the road
The way you went before we had to part."

She would have faced the future with a smile
Though desolation seemed to close about—
And, though the night seemed weird and cold and dark,
Have clenched her hands—and boldly started out!

• • • •

She would have met each threat, each fear, each pain;
No matter how the shadows might have grown . . .
She would have looked them bravely in the face
And with her fearless spirit stared them down.

She would have faced the torments of the earth
With that great heart that never knew defeat, Saying, "The course is forward . . . and because I know you are beside me, life is sweet."

She would have said, "Get on! Have done with sobs!
Though I have watched and helped you year by year,
Now have I contacts in this other world
Through which I aid you more than ever, dear!"

• • • •

She would have said, "As happy as we were,
A greater joy than ever now is mine;
If you've the love and faith I thought you had
You KNOW what blessings now about me shine."

• • • •

She would have said, "Thy kingdom come . . . It has!
And, oh, the restfulness and peace and joy!"
She would have whispered, "We are closer now
Than ever through the rich, gay years, my boy!"

Berlin Certain Czech Germans Will Turn Nazi; Moscow Blames Britain For Inaction; Vatican Fears For Catholics.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin.

GERMANY evidently is convinced that Sudeten (southern) Germans in Czechoslovakia can be taken under the wing of the Nazi eale without intervention by Germany. Such confidence apparently explained tonight how the Reich could assure Czechoslovakia she had no hostile intentions and, at the same time, proclaim that the union of all Germans under Fuehrer Hitler still was incomplete.

Madly joyous Berlin was drained of its luminaries as the retinue following Hitler's triumphal homecoming to nazified Vienna grew. And with it grew the importance of Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, left behind to play an unique role as Hitler's deputy fuehrer.

In the absence of Joachim von Ribbentrop, Goering, Germany's No. 2 Nazi, even took over the functions of the foreign minister. He was wielding the chief executive power virtually alone. This gave rise again to the geeneral belief that Hitler will entrust Goering permanently with the active running of the government, even as chancellor or prime minister, while Der Fuehrer himself plans a future "Reich of all the Germans."

Goering Assures Czechs Of Germany's Friendship.

NO SOONER had the German minister to Prague reported yesterday that German military planes had flown over Czech territory than Goering summoned Dr. Vojtech Mastny, the Czech minister. Goering assured Dr. Mastny the flights were all a mistake, that they would not happen again and that Czechoslovakia need fear nothing from Germany, who has no hostile designs on her little eastern neighbor.

(In London Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain disclosed that Germany had assured Czechoslovakia that German troops in Austria have been given "strictest orders" to keep 15 kilometers—9½ miles—from the Czech frontier.)

Yet, Germany declares the union of all Germans by no means was accomplished by the absorption of Austria. Nor, she says, has the problem of territorial expansion been solved either by way of colonies of Germany's "Drang nach Osten"—onward march to the east.

HITLER'S annexation of Austria in advance of his announced plebiscite, April 10, surprised even the most ardent Nazis. When Arthur Seyss-Inquart became chancellor of Austria Friday night it was said Austria would continue as an outwardly independent nation much the same as the Free City of Danzig. Danzig still is an entity separate and distinct from Germany, although it is governed, in fact, by Hitler.

Inspired comment Saturday night said the Austrian people would decide for themselves in the plebiscite whether they wanted to join Germany. Hitler's speech at Linz, Austria, said virtually as much. But by Sunday noon Goering could tell diplomats and other officials that the result of the prebiscite was bound to mean anschluss (union of Austria and Germany.)

Meanwhile, Julius Streicher, Germany's No. 1 anti-Semite, said at Nurnberg that even the formality of a plebiscite was unnecessary. Streicher has gone to Vienna. Nazi headquarters were silent on his mission. Streicher, apparently, knew more than was known in Berlin. Sources here which usually reflect the official viewpoint said yesterday the "independence of the Austrian administration has not even indirectly been interfered with."

Hardly had they spoken when Hitler announced in Linz that Austria already was part of Germany and the Austrian president, Wilhelm Miklas, resigned.

Moscow Sees War Omen In Capture Of Austria.

MEANTIME, from Moscow it was reported that the newspaper Izvestia, speaking for the Soviet Union, has "sharply condemned" the threat to "the peace of Europe" in Germany's absorption of Austria.

Concern for the fate of Czechoslovakia was expressed by E. Alexandroff, who might be considered a semiofficial spokesman for the government, since he is its newspaper's commentator on foreign affairs. The Soviet Union, however, he said, "can quite calmly watch the course of events" because of the belief "its borders are inaccessible" to Germany.

Newspapers refrained from mentioning the Soviet pact to aid Czechoslovakia in event of aggression, but recalled France's treaty with the war-created republic.

Pravda, organ of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, pointed out France "remained passive" over "the seizure of Austria," adding that Czechoslovakia was the "next likely victim" of Germany. The paper blamed Great Britain for encouraging Reichsfuehrer Hitler by failing to oppose his policies with direct action.

Vatican Pessimistic Over Fate Of Catholics.

IN ROME, the Osservatore Romano, Vatican organ, expressed doubt that Austrian Catholics would be spared the "persecutions" suffered by their fellows in Germany under Nazi rule.

After voicing hope that the "persecutions" which "agitate and torment millions of German Catholics" might "halt at the old frontiers," the newspaper continued:

"But is it possible, in the face of various significant symptoms, to hope this?

"The provisions taken at once in the Salzburg Diocese, the search and closing of central headquarters and other centers of the Catholic Action in Austria, which are guaranteed by the concordat (between Austria and the Vatican), throw a grievous shadow on the very hope for the new order of things."

A Vatican news agency today said "the line of conduct adopted by the Holy See with respect to Germany's absorption of Catholic Austria "is to employ every effort to protect religious interests, but to avoid any interference whatever in political questions."

"This preoccupation is all the greater in view of the fact that somewhat confused reports render orientation difficult.

"Yesterday word was recevied of violence against Catholic Action centers, but today these reports do not appear confirmed. At the same time there is a general extension of police measures."

The communique denied as "without foundation" a report that Cardinal Innitzer, Bishop of Vienna, soon will arrive at the Vatican.

Roosevelt Asks Congress To Act To Save Forests

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt recommended Federal action yesterday to end the denuding of forests and to rehabilitate a "No Man's Land" of cut-over acres.

In a special message to Congress, he urged that House and Senate establish a joint committee to study the problem and propose legislation for enactment next year.

"States, communities and private capital can do much to help," he said. "But the fact remains that, with some outstanding exceptions, most of the States, communities and private companies have, on the whole, accomplished little to retard or check the continuing process of using up our forest resources without replacement."

He recommended particular consideration of the situation respecting private forest lands and the following five points:

The adequacy and effectiveness of present activities in protecting public and private forest lands from fire, insects and diseases, and of co-operative efforts between the Federal Government and the States.

Other measures, Federal and State, which may be necessary and advisable to insure that timber cropping on privately owned forest lands may be conducted as continuous operations, with the productivity of the lands built up against future requirements.

The need for extension of Federal, State and community ownership of forest land, and of planned public management of them.

The need for such public regulatory controls as will adequately protect private as well as the broad public interests in all forest lands.

Methods and possibilities of employment in forestry work on private and public forest lands, and possibilities of liquidating such public expenditures as are or may be involved.

The president said if preliminary action was taken at this session he would address letters to State Governors asking their full co-operation in the move.

The Showing Up Of Mussolini.

WITH AS GOOD grace as he could muster under the circumstances, Mussolini has given his approval to the swallowing up of Austria by the Third Reich. Whereupon Hitler wired him: "I will never forget you for this!"

Mussolini knows he has been out-smarted, outmaneuvered, double-crossed.

It was not so many years ago that in a speech at Milan he declared:

We defended and shall continue to defend the independence of the Austrian republic—an independence consecrated by the blood of a chancellor, small in stature, but great in spirit and heart.

• • • •

AT THAT TIME Mussolini could look back with satisfaction to the time when by the dispatch of troops to the Brenner Pass he had helped prevent a Nazi putsch on the other side of the line. He was then the arbiter of Austria's destinies.

Now all he has to look back upon is a succession of lost opportunities to bolster up the peace of Europe and in so doing keep Austria alive and Germany in check. But, for the sake of his role as a twentieth century Caesar, seeking to revive the glories of ancient Rome, he gambled with his country's destinies. He lost and disastrously. But he is so much the prisoner of his program that he cannot admit this. Nor can he abandon that opportunistic course which has brought Italy—and Europe—to its present sorry pass. He must go on.

• • • •

IT IS NOW clear that had the League system and all it stood for continued to function in Europe, Austria today would still be a going concern and Italy's own security, now very seriously threatened by Austria's disappearance, would be assured.

The League system was based on the very simple principle that the security of any nation, even the smallest and weakest, is the concern of all. And it rested on the assumption that no one nation, however ruthless and powerful, would dare attempt an aggression against the combined opposition of all the others.

This idea of collective security aroused nothing but guffaws in Fascist Italy. Italy, said the Duce, does not believe in the principle of keeping weak nations alive or preventing strong and virile nations (meaning Italy) from expanding beyond their frontiers in search of a place in the sun.

It was the philosophy of the freebooter. And it found a fitting expression in the Ethiopian campaign. That was to give Mussolini a succession of shallow victories, Victor Emmanuel the bauble of an imperial title and the Italian people and nation a vast succession of headaches—which are not yet over. But the results are already proving disastrous.

Far more than the Manchurian incident, it was the Ethiopian crisis which led to the breakdown of collective security in Europe.

• • • •

WITH THIS development Mussolini expressed himself as perfectly satisfied. Henceforth there would be no collective barriers to further Italian adventures. There would be only the feeble opposition of France and Great Britain to reckon with, and this opposition could be offset by a deal with Hitler.

As a blackmailing device the Berlin-Rome axis was temporarily of considerable value to Mussolini. It permitted him, for instance, to embark with impunity on a program of large-scale intervention in Spain. It gave promise of enabling him to dominate the Mediterranean. And, looking into the future, the Duce could see Tunis and other bits of colonial domain torn from the enfeebled hands of the French and others. The second Roman empire was on the march, even thought it meant the impoverishment of the Italian people.

But it was the continued existence of Austria that made the axis possible. In Ethiopia and Spain Mussolini had given hostages to fortune. He could not afford, while embarking on foreign adventures, to leave the door to the Brenner open. The agreement with Hitler assured him, or so he thought, that this door would remain closed.

• • • •

WE KNOW how Hitler kept that promise. With the balance of military power steadily increasing in Germany's favor, Italy from 1936 on found itself forced more and more to trust to Hitler's good faith to keep Austria as a buffer between them.

For this reason concessions had to be made to the Fuehrer. In July, 1936, Schuschnigg, at Mussolini's behest, found it necessary to proclaim Austria a "German state." To the Austrian chancellor that was merely the statement of a reality. To Hitler, however, it was a tool by which the nazification of Austria could be achieved.

The implication of the July, 1936, treaty was plain. Italy alone could no longer defend Austrian independence against German attack as she had done in 1934. If Austria were to be saved it would have to be by more than Italy alone; that is either by a combination of powers acting in alliance or by the collectivity of nations acting through the League. As it happened, Mussolini hated the League and regarded its weakening rather than strengthening as a boon to Italy. But the weakening of the League also destroyed the cement that made common action by the great powers possible.

So when the test came in Austria, Italy dared not act and it was too late to summon other powers to her side. She had to stand by and see Austria swallowed up without protest and even put a good face on it in the hope that out of gratitude and the desire to weaken Great Britain and France further, Hitler would continue supporting the Duce in Spain.

• • • •

BUT, WHATEVER happens in Spain, Italy finds itself in a perilous position. The Nazi tidal wave has now swept down to the very frontiers of the kingdom and south of the Brenner are a quarter of a million German-speaking Tyrolese. If the balance of power between Germany and Italy was, even before the Austrian putsch, heavily weighted in Germany's favor, the disparity has increased enormously as a result of that event. Italy, too, is now in the path of danger; and Italy alone cannot stand up against the Third Reich.

The shelter of collective security would be very useful to Italy at this moment. It may be needed more than ever if Hitler continues along his present path. But the dike which once stood in the way of aggression has been smashed to smithereens. And no one wielded the sledge hammer more ferociously than Mussolini himself. To advance his own personal glory he betrayed his people, his nation and the world.

'Canada's Recovery

By Leonard P. Ayres

Enviable Comparison.

IT WOULD BE prudent for us to ponder well the questions suggested by the discrepancies between the results of our recovery efforts and those that Canada has achieved. There is a country so like our own in populations, institutions and business procedures that for thousands of miles along the border, except at its eastern end, the traveler crossing the line finds it hard to realize that he is in a different country.

Canada's per capita wealth is far lower than ours. The climate is more rigorous. She lacks many of our natural resources, especially coal and iron. She was harder hit by the depression. And yet Canada has done a far better recovery job than we have, and we ought to be asking ourselves why she has succeeded and why we have not.

• • • •

THIS RELAPSE of business is precisely described by the French phrase which calls such a collapse a "crisis of confidence." Two American statesmen, who have long since passed on, expressed in speeches exactly the basic principles which apply to this troubled time. Thomas B. Reed once said: "If a period of prosperity could be expressed in a single word, that word would be 'confidence;' and if a period of adversity could be expressed in a single word, that word would be 'distrust.'"

That sounds as though Reed had foreseen our present problems, but Daniel Webster, speaking in the Senate a little over a century ago, seems to have been discussing the difficulty of finding the solution we are seeking, for he said: "Confidence is a thing not to be produced by compulsion. Men cannot be forced into trust."

Senate Limits Roosevelt Plan To Reorganize

Amendment Will Prevent President From Killing Bureau Functions.

The Senate yesterday cut short two weeks of controversial debate on the Administration's Government reorganization bill and speedily adopted a dozen noncontroversial amendments to the measure, largely modifying its scope.

A test of opposition strength on more sweeping provisions of the bill will be reached at 2 p. m. today when a vote is scheduled on the Administration's proposal for a single civil service administrator, displacing the present three-man Civil Service Commission.

The opposition is rallying behind an amendment by Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, to eliminate all provision for one-man civil service administration and to maintain the bi-partisan Civil Service Commission as presently constituted.

Amendments Adopted.

Outstanding amendments adopted yesterday would prevent the President from completely abolishing the functions of any bureau, and would set up individual reviewing boards in each department to hear appeals of employes from their efficiency ratings.

The first amendment, supported by Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, was in answer to criticism by Senator Harry Flood Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, that the President under the Byrnes bill could abolish functions as well as bureaus. Byrnes said the effect will be to prevent the President from repealing any law that Congress has enacted by wiping out the operations of any agency. The President still would be empowered to issue reorganization executive orders transferring the functions of one agency to another, and then abolishing the first agency.

The provision for employe reviewing boards in each department was put forward by Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, and accepted by Senator Byrnes.

Reviewing Boards.

The reviewing boards would be headed by a chairman named by the Civil Service administrator, and include two members named by the department head. Complaints of employes against ratings given them under the classification act could be carried to the board as a matter of right.

The other significant modifying amendments accepted by Byrnes yesterday and approved by the Senate would eliminate power for the President to fill by appointment and Senate confirmation any position he declares to be "policy-forming" and would strike out a section Senator Byrd says would enable departments to employ as many experts and consultants as they think necessary, on a temporary basis.

Budget Bureau Shifted.

Other amendments approved by the Senate:

Removed the Budget Bureau from Treasury control, and made it an independent agency, with a director appointed by the President, but subject to Senate confirmation.

Eliminated a provision for renaming the Department of Interior the "Department of Conservation."

Limited the President's power to reorganize the agencies of Government to July 1, 1940, instead of the three-year authority provided in the original bill.

The most bitterly contested of the modifying amendments remain to be voted on. They include the Walsh proposal to continue the present Civil Service Commission; the Wheeler amendment to require congressional approval of the President's reorganization orders, and the Byrd amendment, to maintain the present General Accounting Office as a check on expenditures.

Byrnes, Vandenburg Clash.

The Byrnes bill would set up an auditor general, responsible to a joint Congressional committee, but with power only of post-audit. There was a sharp exchange yesterday between Byrnes and Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, when the South Carolinian proposed to cut down the size of the joint committee that would name the new auditor general. Byrnes denied it was his purpose to bar minority representation, and withdrew the amendment.

Meanwhile, President Robert L. Johnson, of the National Civil Service Reform League, in a letter to Byrnes, voiced concern lest "the most vital part of the bill, the authority granted to the President to extend the classified service, may be seriously jeopardized or lost entirely through focusing too much attention on matters of much less importance affecting the administration of the civil service."

Coal "Scandal" Cited.

President Johnson's letter cited what he called "the scandalous situation that has developed in the Bituminous Coal Commission" as showing the urgent necessity of extending the merit system to agencies now operating outside of it.

Johnson said more than 950 positions in the Bituminous Coal Commission are now excepted from Civil Service rules, while 300 generally lower paid positions are under the merit system. The president of the league charged "wrangling over patronage" has delayed the commission's work, and said there has been "callous disregard of the public's pocketbook."

The letter commended Byrnes for his indorsement of some of the merit system amendments suggested by the league.

Senators Clark, of Missouri; McKellar, of Tennessee, and Tydings, of Maryland (Democrats), and Borah, of Idaho (Republican), joined Walsh yesterday in opposing a single Civil Service administrator with a 15-year term. Clark said a national party chairman could be named to the post; Borah said the official could be removed at will by the President, and Walsh said the official would be a personnel "dictator." Byrnes replied that the country might as well have three Presidents, three Secretaries of Treasury, and three Secretaries of War, as to have a three-man Civil Service Commission.

It was a very swell week-end, we having been there and know . . . And we led the block of revolters against that early morning hike . . . Such a practice, said Samuel M. Whereupon, Barrett downed six cups of black coffee, and went out for a leisurely hike of 300 yards . . . There he gave his definition of exercise: "To wave one's hand at an acquaintance across the street is sufficient exercise for any one day," said he, finding immediate agreement among the revolters against hikes before breakfast. Interesting note on a brief expression of purpose: The U. S. Forestry Service sums up in less than a dozen one and two syllable words its purpose: "The Greatest Good to the Greatest Number in the Long Run" . . . The definition of policy was made by the Secretary of Agriculture when the Forest Service was established and was contained in a letter to the chief forester . . . "where conflicting interests must be reconciled, the question will always be decided from the standpoint of the greatest good to the greatest number in the long run." And when you study the record of the Forest Service you will see that the policy—as so tersely stated—has been consistently held—and some others might profit by their example.

He was born on a farm in Champaign County, Ohio, March 13, 1868, and as superintendent of schools in Clark County, Ohio, in 1902, helped boys and girls organize agricultural clubs. In announcing Graham's retirement, Dr. C. B. Smith, chief, division of co-operative extension work, commented:

"His early extension work with boys and girls is remarkably similar to that of our present 4-H clubs. His educational work, both in Ohio, and since 1915 as a member of the Federal extension staff, has stood for the highest ideals supported by enthusiasm, imagination and reality."

Graham lives at 19 Wine avenue, Hyattsville. After retirement, he will go to Ohio to continue his educational activities.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Intimidated by Men's 'Suggestive Advances,' Girl Asks How to Achieve Friendship With Them.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have lived in this city one year. Before coming here I lived in a small Southern city where I had a host of friends of both sexes. Now, at the age of 24, I find myself very popular with girls but it seems impossible the hold the attention of any men to whom I am introduced. Several whom I have met have very much disillusioned me with suggestive advances.

• • • •

As an average young woman who is considered attractive, well groomed and carefully reared, I want to know what is expected of a girl in this town. What sort of girl must one be in order to enjoy normal friendship and companionship with a man to whom one is attracted and would like to know better? This is not my query alone, but that of many girls whom I have heard discuss the problem. The girls I know all say that men seem to think all girls are "on the make." This is not true, and I would like your opinion and advice, please. BOTHERED BETH.

• • • •

DEAR BOTHERED BETH: Whatever social position and popularity one enjoys as a child and as an adolescent must be attributed, in some degree, to the accident of birth and to whatever advantages of schooling, neighborhood, home background, dress, entertaining, etc., that one's parents provided. However, when one branches out on his own as an adult, divorces himself from his family background by merging with the 4,000,000 in a strange metropolis and undertakes to find his place in a new environment, he must stand or fall by his own inner resources when it comes to making and holding worthwhile friends.

• • • •

It is my opinion that girls who voice your particular complaint are girls who don't, really, know what it is all about, to borrow a phrase from the vernacular. You are at once afraid of men and of your own emotions. You don't know how to stand on your own feet, socially; you don't know how to make it clear, in a leisurely, graceful, tolerant way, that you do live by certain conventionally approved standards. You don't know how to give a man enough rope to hang himself, as it were, without getting your own feet entangled in the yardage conceded.

• • • •

According to my observation and experience, any girl, anywhere, has only to be instinctively well bred and fastidious, on the one hand, and naturally agreeable, friendly, kindly, human and humane, on the other hand, in order to be a thoroughgoing social success with whatever men are really attractive to her. If she is instinctively well bred and fastidious, she will be attracted only to the higher type of man, the man who lives, as she does, on a mental as well as on a physical plane of being. If she is naturally agreeable, friendly and kindly, she will register on his consciousness as a distinctly feminine personality a hypothetical or potential complement of himself, an interesting unknown quantity that merits investigation.

• • • •

If she is human, she will understand the biological and emotional factors which prompt him to test her reactions to lovemaking. And if she is humane, she will be infinitely tactful and resourceful in acquainting him, gradually and by subtle indirection, with her emotional and social attitudes toward this very pertinent question. She will not assume the "Sir, how dare you?" attitude, the attitude of shocked repulsion, indignant anger, sorrowful reproach, etc., all of which imply that he is something of a beast. Cheerfully, wittily, casually, skillfully, she will contrive constantly to show him the light, so to speak, without putting him on the defensive altogether.

• • • •

There is an old saying to the effect that a woman who is no longer called upon to resist aggressive amorous advances is a woman who has ceased to be attractive. All women wise in the ways of men realize this; philosophically accept it, and develop a technique, at once artistic, self-protective and urbane, for dealing with it. M. H.

Matron Advised To Avoid Black As Dress Color

Simplicity Best for Older Woman, Declares Radio Actress.

By Ethel Ehlen.

If you are of an age quaintly called the "matron," here are three important things to rememmber in selecting clothes, according to the advice of Kate McComb, radio actress, in a recent interview in New York. "Never wear dull black—it is aging; concentrate on simplicity, it gives the illusion of youthful lines; be careful about hats, and don't wear the so-called 'silly' versions." Another bit of advice, which Mrs. McComb said was adaptable to women of all ages, was, "be sure your clothes are suited to you as well as in step with style trends, and then forget all about them. In other words, poise comes with the knowledge that you are carefully and becomingly groomed."

Older women should be clever enough to adapt fashion trends and vagaries of the moment to their own special age and figure problems, Mrs. McComb maintains. "Select from the outstanding style influence of a season those which can be used to advantage to your own needs, and never wear anything that does not flatter you," this authority declared with emphasis. This same idea applies to skirt lengths, Mrs. McComb exclaimed; in a season of short skirts choose a length which is good for your height, weight and general contours, rather than a length which is the "rage" of the mode.

Watch Your Wardrobe.

"Don't let your wardrobe get shabby and inadequate," Mrs. McComb declared. This starting from scratch each season is not wise or satisfactory purchasing." The best way, she pointed out, is to keep the wardrobe in good condition and replenish with new costumes and new things for those which are discarded. This constitutes a well-planned wardrobe, she contends. The most important thing to remember when planning a wardrobe is appropriateness to the occasion, Mrs. McComb believes—including costumes and ensembles which will serve every purpose to which the life you lead will require.

While the basic dresses, suits and the like should be simple, Mrs. McComb says the older woman can go a bit gay with accessories—chosen to harmonize with her type. Such accents as well-chosen costume jewelry, color contrast, exotic handbags, tinted gloves; can do much she thinks, to give individuality to otherwise simple costumes. In choosing her own wardrobe, this actress likes black, navy or brown for daytime and pastel tints (all but yellow) for evening; all shades of rose and blue are also included in her own color chart. Prints, if properly chosen as to color combination and pattern, also may be worn to good advantage by the older woman, she commented.

Ideas on Make-Up.

In the matter of make-up, Mrs. McComb has very definite ideas. "Cosmetics should be used in moderation when one grows older," she emphatically declared. "A little rouge of soft color tone with lipstick in the same color range, and powder which blends with the natural skin tones. The coiffure, too, is important," she maintains—"simple, becoming and soft in styling, rather than harsh and extreme. If your clothes and make-up are becoming, style-correst and suitable to the occasion, then you are well-groomed," contends Mrs. McComb. Consequently everything being right, no one thing is conspicious. And, this constitutes a smart person," in her estimation. "The older woman," she concluded, "should try to look as young and happy as she can—and still appear dignified and chic."

Mrs. McComb, who is Mrs. O'Neill in the sketch, "the O'Neills," on NBC, and who has been in radio work for nine years, started her career on the legitimate stage in New York. "Women of all ages could learn a lot by observing costumes worn in stage productions," she remarked, "not only the line and color of the clothes, but the backgrounds of which they are an integral part."

Street Ensembles Youthful in New Paris Showings.

Paris (AP).—Youthful street ensembles, brightly colored evening dresses and high-necked cocktail gowns today featured openings of Paris style shows.

Street ensembles with wrist length, fitted jackets, slender skirts and contrasting blouses were presented by the house of Worth. In the afternoon ensembles, the dreses frequently were elaborated by drapery and trimmed with passementeries or beading.

There were many lingerie touches on dresses and suits, which featured longer waits and shorter skirts. There was a pronounced masculine note in strictly tailored three quarter jackets for day wear. Similar styling marked evening coats.

The evening mode generally was extremely rich in line and fabric, with the silhouette determined by the material. One silhouette was moulded to the body as far as the hipline from which it flared.

Cocktail ensembles featured high-necked, long-sleeved, and long slender body-moulded dresses whose bodices were elaborated with beading or pastel laces.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Detroit's Smallpox Scare.

A young lady, hostess in a taxi dance hall in Detroit, danced continuously night after night, with partner after partner. One morning she woke up with headache, backache and fever, and, in the course of time, a rash all over her skin, which turned out to be smallpox.

Naturally, the news of this eruption was somewhat disquieting to all of her partners, as well as her companion hostesses in the dance hall. She was certainly close enough to all of them to have communicated the disease.

Smallpox is carried by contact, and from this dance hall nobody knew how many contacts had spread out over Detroit's population. Certainly several thousands. Detroit was in for a good scare, as all cities are when such a thing happens, because nowadays we all blithely assume that smallpox does not exist; that everybody has been vaccinated and that it can't happen here.

It was found out in Detroit that a good many people who had been in actual contact with this patient during the period of incubation, which is the most contagious period, had never been vaccinated at all. Many others had not been revaccinated.

In the news dispatches it was stated that "vaccination may provide protection for only five years." This is not strictly in accordance with the most authoritative conclusions. In general, it can be said about vaccination that while it is not 100 per cent protection against smallpox, it is, nevertheless, very nearly complete, particularly when a successful vaccination has been comparatively recent. In the great majority of instances a successful vaccination in infancy, an immune reaction at 6 years, and perhaps an accelerated reaction at 16 years gives protection for life.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, March 14.

EVERY SEALYHAM, some gentleman said, has his day. And without intending the faintest jot of disrespect or even ribbing, this seems to be the day of the Expectant Papa.

ALICE HUGHES

The first hint of this phenomenon struck my desk in the form of a new book called "Father's Doing Nicely," written by a Mr. David Victor, who is not only an active daddy himself, but is also managing editor of an important magazine dealing with health matters. Father Victor's book is an extremely complete, lucid and amiable tome on the care and feeding of the nervous young man placed in this highly complicated position.

Our author scatters words of wisdom on mental, physical and spiritual aspects of the case, and I especially recommend the little volume to every young man about to stand before the man in authority and intone the fateful words. In fact, I can think of no nicer gift from Her to Him as they teeter on the brink of matrimony.

Hard upon this, came the opening of a veritable School for Expectant Fathers at our Maternity Center Association. Over it presides Miss (correct) Sarah Ward Gould, and as this is written she tells me that seven young husbands have already signed for the course of five lessons—which includes actual practice in baby dressing, bathing, powdering and gentle dandling. The models, however, are only dolls—which neither squall nor squirm. Naturally, many of our newspapers sent young men (all bachelors) to take the course. They were wrapped in aprons and instructed how to sprinkle powder where it will do the most good. Then they wrote the cutest stories! But there's nothing funny about the dithery young husband in this new and parlous spot, and I am heartily glad that his case is being taken up seriously. It will lead to real understanding of, and helpfulness toward, the Little Woman!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Whom do you consider the most interesting and thrilling—oh well, why not say the greatest?—woman alive in this country? Is there any doubt that it is the forever amazing Helen Keller—blind, deaf, dumb, yet who has lived such a full and fascinating life? I saw her at our Waldorf-Astoria just the other day, and marveled all over again, of course. Her incredible "teacher," Anne Sullivan Macy, has gone from her and us, but Helen carries on, and came to us to appear on a radio program. She recently spoke to 10,000 teachers at Atlantic City, and last fall returned from six months in the Far East. What a wonder!

Hair up or hair down? The hair-doers have been insisting that the girls put it way up, with all sorts of waves and flounces, while thousands of ladies, here at least, have fought to the death for the long bob. Mr. Sydney, wool-carder of a mighty shop here, has done a "compromise coiffure." Swirled up in front, hanging gracefully and naturally in the stern. Well, will that make everybody happy? After all, what's the sense in swishing the hair up when Paris sends us hats that won't grip the head so arranged? Fie, and again fie!

• • • •

Lillian Gish, the movie star of the old days and now adorning Broadway in "The Star-Wagon," tells me that she is doing her autobiography. Lil has had a fascinating life—a trouper since babyhood with sister Dorothy, made a star by Griffith nearly 25 years ago, and a rich theatrical life in the past decade. And the titanic tragedy of her long-paralyzed mother, one of the loveliest of women. It should be a wondrous yarn, and I hope it goes.

Gladys Parker, the enfant terrible of the dress design world, has just unveiled her spring collection, and it is as pert and perky as the little redhead herself. Here's one—long tailored topcoat, worn with a dress and an ascot. From pocket to pocket, across the front, goes a gold chain with a lipstick on one end and a compact on the other. Hi, there, Johnny!

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

When Ladies Lie.

WOMEN are the champion liars when it comes to social questions, says Dr. William Moulton Marston, originator of the lie detector. While they may be as honest as men in business matters, they cannot help fibbing about love, marriage, divorce, the emotions and their social contacts. Now men, on the contrary, believes Dr. Marston, usually blurt out the truth about these things.

• • • •

Dr. Marston proved his assertion by trying his machine on a young (and, of course, "pretty") divorcee. However, few women would have gotten excited about his charges anyway. They are so accustomed to having jealous sweethearts accuse them and superior husbands criticize them, and to hearing men in general boast about their honesty. ("Now there's one thing about me—I won't lie!") that they have simply resigned to being the devious sex.

• • • •

Men's touchiness in relation to women's honesty might well be the subject of psychological probing. "She lied to me!" has become an alibi for everything from divorce to murder. Nothing on earth will make a man so indignant and self-righteous as a feminine fib. Can it be that he gets so hot under the collar over feminine chicanery because he realizes his own clumsiness in any battle of artifice?

• • • •

HOWEVER THAT MAY BE, most of women's lies work to men's advantage. Women originally may have fallen into the habit of duplicity to save their own hides in a man-run world. But now at least 90 per cent of their lies are a maternal protection to men's ego. Feminine guile may make men very uneasy, but complete feminine frankness in social relations would make them far more uncomfortable.

• • • •

The girl who says, "I'd love to go to dinner with you, but I have another engagement," may be telling a lie. But how would the man like it if she said, "No, I won't go to dinner with you. I'd rather stay home and listen to the radio." How would he like it if, when he asked if he'd told her the one about the two Lithuanians or the time he helped a mysterious Russian countess pay her room rent, she replied, "Yes, 17 times, and I'll scream if you start it again."

• • • •

Yes, women lie. They lie when they assure a husband his bald spot isn't getting a bit bigger; that even though he is celebrating his forty-fifth birthday he doesn't look a day over 39, and that a man never shows his age anyway; that the weight he has taken on isn't noticeable at all at the belt; that the new checked overcoat he so proudly wears home makes him look as if he had stepped out of Esquire; that maybe they WILL get more good out of a new shiny roadster than a living room carpet; that of course he didn't make a fool of himself after his eighth Scotch and soda at the Jinks' party.

• • • •

WOMEN LIE when they tell an office associate they don't mind stopping their work to spell a word for him; that they have all the time in the world and they're glad to have him drop by the desk; that they'd love to see the kodak pictures he took of his children or on his outing with his girl friend; that they never tire of hearing about his experiences in Tahiti; that nobody can notice he didn't have time to shave; that his ideas of how things ought to be done are exactly right (with a few minor changes); that they had forgotten all about the dollar he borrowed the day before pay day.

• • • •

Women lie when they tell a man they're not tired; that they're not mad; that they're not hurt; that they are not jealous; that nothing at all is the matter; that they really don't mind at all what he does, and that they want him to feel free as air; that they don't love him possessively; that they never want to cramp his style; that they don't blame him in the slightest for whatever it was that he did; that they've completely forgiven and forgotten everything and that he is so strong they would trust him to the ends of the earth.

• • • •

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Rigorous Exercises Like Those of N. Y. Models Perfect Figure.

By Ida Jean Kain.

HOW TO TAKE 3 inches off the hipline in three weeks! Lie flat on the back on the floor, knees flexed and feet together. Holding the upper part of the body as flat as possible, give a mighty twist at the waist and flop over so that the side of the left leg is on the floor. Twist in reverse and flop over to bring the right leg down with a thump.

This is called going through the "thumps and bumps" and will give you a faint idea of what it takes to make a model figure. Those lovely girls who adorn the magazines, swish through fashion shows and even sometimes land in Hollywood come by their perfect figures the hard way. If you would follow the same routine, you could have the same kind of figure.

It's hard work. Up at "Models, Preferred," swanky New York training school, the next crop of glamour girls go through a discipline that would impress a West Point Cadet. They arrive promptly at 8:45 every day and go to work on the exercises that make slim hips, a perfect bust contour and graceful posture.

Raising Bust Stressed.

Their program is so effective that I want to tell you about it. In addition to "thumps and bumps," which you will find extremely slimming for that hipline, there is a bracing set of exercises for the posture.

Posture discipline is especially directed toward raising the bust contour, for as Miss Ann Delafield, supervisor of exercise, puts it, "Today a girl must have a chest—without a chest she gets nowhere!" The bust measurement should be equidistant between the shoulder bone and the crest of the hip, there should be no hollow in the front part of the shoulder, and the neck should be long. If you can add an inch to a short neck while taking a few inches off the hips, so much the better.

Here is one of the best of the posture exercises. It requires cooperation, so try it with your daughter:

POSITION: Sit back to back, so closely that there is no space between the two figures. Cross the legs in front of the body tailor fashion, and place hands on floor in front of feet.

MOVEMENT: Reach the hands simultaneously high overhead, clasp each others' hands and pull and stretch upward. Unclasp the hands and, keeping the palms turned up the elbows straight, slowly lower the arms to the floor at the sides.

Keep Back to Wall.

You get much the same results by sitting against the wall tailor fashion and digging the back into the wall and stretching up with the neck. After the arms are stretched upward, move them slowly down the wall. As in the first version of the exercise, have the palms up, elbows straight.

In these posture exercises it is important to press the small of the back against the wall and to stretch upward with the neck. A marvelous neck exercise is to keep the nape of the neck flat against the wall and slowly turn the head from side to side.

Test your posture several times a day by standing with back to a wall. You should eventually be able to stand with the entire back, from heels to head, flat against the wall. Begin with the heels slightly out and knees bent to make it easier. Dig in with the back, lift chest high, and push the nape of the neck against the wall.

These are just a few of the exercises practiced for hours each day by the serious-minded models, and if you are in earnest about making your figure over you can do no better than to follow such a program. A half hour's daily exercise, concentrating on hips, waist, bust and posture, can give you a model figure.

Don't Pose! Warns Woman Expert on The Art of Charm

"You can't pose if you want to be a charming person," says Mary Margaret McBride, magazine writer and radio columnist. She believes that knowing yourself and then making the most of your best qualities marks the beginning of any search for charm. Every day Miss McBride gets hundreds of how-to-be-charming appeals from the women who tune in on her noonday radio chat.

In addition to the don't pose warning, the author and commentator has listed other do's and don'ts on the road to charm.

"First, don't pity yourself out loud and don't praise yourself out loud. In short, just don't talk too much about yourself unless it's to somebody like your mother, who's dutybound to be interested in you. Even then don't talk quite as much about yourself as you really want to.

"Don't repeat mean gossip—and that's important, because usually you don't even know that it's true. Think how you'd feel to have the same things said about you.

"Don't be a rubber stamp. If your hair looks better long than short, then wear it long. Whatever coiffure you use, keep it well dressed. If the newest styles don't suit you, wear the kind of clothes that do. Never be a fashion slave if you're looking out for charm. After all, individuality is the greatest charm, for it makes you stand out from the crowd. There are girls who simply obscure themselves by walking, talking and dressing just like everybody else.

"Don't talk too loud and don't twang and slur your words. Don't contradict abruptly. Instead of shouting, 'it's not that way at all,' try saying, 'well, I think you're partially right, but——'

"Don't be too dignified. It spoils your own and other people's fun. Laugh at yourself sometimes.

"The do's are closely related to the don'ts. Know yourself, and when you've found out what you're really like, then match yourself up—clothes, manner, conversation, personality.

Budgeting Augments Income

IT'S like getting a raise," says Jim to Janet—and that's really what budgeting has meant to them.

By pulling expenses into line—by stopping up leaks — their budget system has added as much to their income as a good raise.

This pulling of expenses into line didn't mean they altered their style of living. But a month on a trial budget showed Janet and Jim some of their expenditures were way out of proportion.

How amazed they were to see that they spent almost as much for operating expenses—for light, fuel, laundry and telephone—as they did for rent.

Quickly they reduced this figure to about 15 per cent of their income—the right proportion. They use low watt bulbs in spots where little light is needed. They keep their home at an even temperature—much more economical than letting the house get too cold and then piling on fuel to warm it.

And what discoveries Janet made when she got out of her shopping rut—and resolved to try new foods. Beef liver as tasty and nutritious as calf's liver? Yes, it is and costs much less.

As for clothes, Janet spent much more than her friends and still wasn't well dressed. Would it help if, instead of buying two cheap dresses for afternoon bridge, she bought one better dress with extra accessories? Yes, she'd look smarter and would save money.

Two Blues, Red, Yellow Are Spring Mode Hues

Four of the colors you may wear this spring—launched in Paris fashion shows—leaped the Atlantic by cable within a minute to be swiftly matched in American dye pots for fabrics and accessories.

They were chalk blue (a grayed tone) and grain yellow (a tannish pigskin hue) from Molyneux; ruby red and deep purplish blue from Alix. Their transmission was made by cable and the color-code machine—a little black-lined box about 30 inches square—patented by Howard Ketcham of New York.

'Tulip Time in Holland' Is Pictured at Legation

By Hope Ridings Miller,

It was "tulip time in Holland" for several hundred Washingtonians at The Netherlands Legation yesterday afternoon to see colored motion pictures portraying the country of windmills and wooden shoes in its most beautiful phase.

Masses of blossoms in trim, nicely kept fields . . . a riot of color moving down the streets of Amsterdam on cartwheels . . . acre on acre of tulips in full bloom, filmed from a speeding train—these were some of the shots flashed on the screen, all by way of giving an idea of Holland's beauties in the springtime. Earlier, there was a motion picture of famous old castles in The Netherlands to illustrate a lecture given by Mme. Virginia Pearce Delgado, of The Hague, under the aegis of the Archaeological Society of Washington.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Members of the society and a scattering of other guests made up the company, seated in the dining room—transformed for the time being into a motion picture theater—to hear Mme. Delgado and to see the films she made in Holland with Dr. Adolph Hustinx. A number of persons in the audience remembered Mme. Delgado as a Washington girl. The daughter of Mrs. W. W. Johnston, she was born and reared here. For a number years, however, she has made her home in Holland, coming back frequently to visit her mother.

For yesterday's event, Mme. Delgado had chosen a becoming frock of green and gold brocade, made on tailored lines with a high neck and long, tight sleeves. A small veiled turban and an intricately fashioned gold necklace were also part of her costume.

Mme. van Haersma de With, wife of The Netherlands Minister, who was hostess for the occasion, was gowned in black, her frock being cut on extremely simple lines with a slightly draped blouse. She received in the second floor reception hall, assisted by Wade Hampton Ellis, president of the Archaeological Society, and Mrs. Ellis, who wore a black and white ensemble. Mr. Ellis also introduced Mme. Delgado.

Three Cabinet Hostesses Among the Guests

Following the illustrated lecture, guests gathered once more in the spacious reception hall where sandwiches, small cakes and other tea-time dainties were served at a long table. Here, there and everywhere, mingling with the guests were hostesses of The Netherlands Legation's staff and Mlle. Nora van Hersma de With, who wore a frock of blue brushed wool set off with a heavy cord around the waist. Countess van Rechteren Limpurg, wife of the Counselor of the Legation, in a tailored black frock with red accents and a small black veiled hat, was also glimpsed in the crowd. Discussing the film with some of her friends, she declared the flower scene made her "very homesick." Mme. Klein Molekamp, wife of the Commercial Counselor of the Legation, was also very much on hand for the party.

Among the guests were three Cabinet hostesses—Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace—Mrs. Tuxtun Beale, in a brown outfit set off with a silver fox neckpiece; Mrs. George Messersmith, Mrs. George T. Summerlin, Mrs. Samuel Herrick, Anthony de Balasy, of the Hungarian Legation; Ralph Snowden Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem, Baroness von Below, Mrs. Frederick Benton.

Also, the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close, the Greek Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos; the Rev. Meade Bolton MacBryde, Mrs. Mitchell Carroll and her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Carroll; Miss Louella Chase, Miss Margaret Delano Gage, and many others.

Mme. Orlicz-Dreszer to Be Feted

Mme. Gustaw Orlicz-Dreszer, wife of the late Inspector General of the Polish army, who was also his country's first Minister of Air, is to be feted at a number of functions in the remainder of her stay in Washington. To mention but a few of the parties planned in her honor, there is the cocktail party to be given by Mrs. Earl Clark Calhoun Saturday afternoon, the tea with Mrs. Tomas Cajigas as hostess on Thursday, March 24, the musicale to be given by Mrs. De Muth Watson on April 3.

According to present plans, Mme. Orlicz-Dreszer will remain in Washington until her daughter, Margaret Rowe, completes her course at the Cathedral school, and then will leave for New York, whence she will sail for Europe on June 9, going directly to her home in Warsaw.

• • • •

HERE AND THERE: The Misses Ann Carroll and Eleanor Eastbourne Meem, debutante daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem, who are now the guests of Mrs. Edward Beale McLean at Palm Beach, Fla., will conclude their Southern sojourn with a yacht trip off the Florida coast the latter part of this month. They will return to Washington with Mrs. McLean and other members of her party the first of next month . . . Mrs. John Alfred White 2d, who, with her husband, Dr. White, recently moved to Washington from Cleveland, has gone to Miami to spend several weeks . . . According to word from the Albanian Legation yesterday, King Zog's three traveling sisters, who were scheduled to return to Washington today, will not be back from Boston until the latter part of the week. Rumor is going the rounds that they have received invitations for a number of parties, among them being one at the Italian Embassy. As everyone knows, the names of the three princesses have been bandied about quite freely with little regard as to how each is properly pronounced. Here's the dope, straight from the Legation. Ruhie is properly called roo-HEE-ya; Myzeyen is mez-ze-YEN, and Maxhide is mah-ji-DAY . . . As everyone knows, also, the girls are not properly called "the Zog sisters," but, since Americans are given to shortening appellations as often as possible, this one has been widely used.

Sparkling Fancy Dress Party Given by Mexican Ambassador

Diplomats Show Up in Artists' Smocks, Russian Blouses and Handle-Bar Mustaches; Envoy Himself Appears in a Turban.

Every kind of a notable, from Dopey the dwarf to Sonja Henie, was in evidence at the large and brilliant fancy dress party given last night by Senorita Erma Castillo Najera, daughter of the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera.

From 10:30 until the small hours of the morning the dancers whirled gayly in the huge room of the embassy, with their high ceilings and crystal chandeliers. Dignified diplomats broke out in a rash of Russian blouses, artists' smocks and handlebar mustaches.

Even the Mexican Ambassador made a concession to the spirit of the occasion. His regular evening costume of white tie and tails was supplemented by a turban twisted around his head in Oriental fashion.

The charming brunette hostess had chosen a costume of the court of Louis XV, a lovely full-skirted gown of ciel blue taffeta heavily embroidered in silver lace. Her hair was dressed in a high pompadour with numerous curls.

Senora Castillo Najera wore the "china poblane," Mexican peasant dress embroidered in brilliant shades. In her hair was a ribbon with the national colors of her homeland.

One of the most impressive ensembles was formed by the numerous family of the Counselor of Embassy and Senora de Quintanilla. The latter wore a stunning Balinese costume, the close-fitting sarong designed with huge flowers and a headdress of brilliant fruits and sheaves of wheat. Her husband was in blue selk pajamas with a full blouse and scarf about the waist adding a Russian touch.

Their daughter Jane came as little Eva, in a pink ruffled dress, and Miss Betty Stallsmith, sister of Senora de Quintanilla, was Topsy in a blue and white dotted dress and her hair done up in pigtails tied with red ribbon. Miss Lulu Quintanilla, sister of the Counselor, came in a group of rollicking "pirates" which included Mercedes and Juan Alfonseca of the Dominican Legation and Andres Pastoriza, jr., son of the Dominican Minister.

Miss Dolly Corbin's Hawaiian hula costume of cellophane created a sensation. With it she wore a lei of pink carnations which she had made herself. Miss Corbin was escorted by John Galliher.

Senora de Bayle, wife of the Minister of Nicaragua, was dressed as the famous little Norwegian skater, Sonja Henie. Gerald Walravens of the Belgian Embassy, who has spent much time in Mexico, wore a costume of that country; Miss Fina Tudela's outfit resembled that of a Danubian peasant, with its red dirndl, and headdress of ribbon streamers. Robert G. de Mendoza, First Secretary of the Cuban Embassy, came dressed as a charro, or Mexican cowboy.

Some of the famous dwarfs of "Snow White" were represented by Pancho and Luis Castillo Najera, sons of the Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera. Raimundo Cuervo, Second Secretary of the Embassy, also came dressed as one of these pixies.

Dr. Rafael Fuentes, genial First Secretary of the Embassy, was costumed as a Naval Officer while his wife was dressed in a blue Juliet gown, with a delicate pearl headdress.

Mme. Fanny d'Albe sang and danced for the assembled company, and Cuban and Mexican music was provided by the talented group which played at the reception given last Friday by Senora de Castillo Najera. Late in the evening a lavish supper, including ham, chicken, salads, sandwiches, and ice cream, was served in the dining room with its interesting mural paintings. The table was centered with a profusion of spring flowers and pale pink candles in silver holders.

Others in the group of several hundred were Miss Emiscah Davis, in a handsome Serbian peasant costume which she acquired on a recent trip to Europe; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, Miss Maruca Tercero, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Mr. and Mrs. William Shea, Mr. and Mrs. James Moran, the Panamanian Minister and Senora de Boyd; the First Secretary of the Ecuadorean Legation and Senora de Crespo, and Mr. and Mrs. William Powell.

The prospective bridegroom is the nephew of Joseph Grew, United States Ambassador to Japan.

Schools Should Serve Individual, Parents Told

Needs of Community Also Have Superseded Uniform Program, Dr. Betzuer Informs Potomac Group.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,

Service adapted to the needs of individual students and the community has replaced the effort for uniformity in school programs, Dr. Jean Betzner asserted yesterday in her address before a meeting of parents of the Potomac School, sponsored by the board of trustees.

Dr. Betzner, associate professor of education at Teachers College, Columbia University, declared schools of today can consider themselves good only in the degree that they contribute to their members and the community. Each school has an integrity, character and purpose of its own, she said—an integrity emerging from insight into the differences in pupils and teachers in the institution.

There no longer is talk of the reading method or the method for teaching French, she pointed out. "Method in teaching has been replaced by as many methods as there are children, all adapted to their individual needs.

"Try to fit children into patterns and they always bulge out somewhere," she said. "They never are average children—and we don't want them to be—and therefore, they invariably depart from patterns. An education plan for children should be one which fits them according to their growth at that time."

A child may be proficient in reading and make an outstanding contribution in art and still not be able to cope successfully with arithmetic, Dr. Betzner said. When his abilities show such definite inclination, the plan of education should encourage the development of his gifts and at the same time provide special training in directions where he shows a weakness, she explained. A school is the sum total of the differences as well as the similarities of those within it, she said, and both must be taken in to consideration.

Too Much Guidance Termed a Mistake

All growing individuals need new experiences which present a challenge to them, Dr. Betzner said, discussing the mistake of surrounding children with too great a sense of protection, thus depriving them of the adventure of meeting new situations.

Parents who have ample means with which to provide their sons and daughters with comfortable homes, food and clothing, are apt to think they have solved these problems entirely for them, she said, but this is often not the case. She told of a little red-haired girl who was unhappy because her mother always dressed her in tones of brown when she wanted red hair ribbons such as the other children wore, and of a little boy who was miserable because he was the only lad on the playground who had not "a pair of corduroy trousers that creaked." In each case, she said, the mother had dressed the child in an outfit she considered becoming and correct, but had not taken into consideration outside influences which presented problems in the child's world.

Children Need Chance For Achievement

Another need emphasized by Dr. Betzner in the child's development was opportunity to achieve in his own right. In both the school and the home, she said, he should have this afforded him. The need for affection . . . to discover and maintain objects of allegiance, was the fourth thing she designated as requisite in his education and development.

Schools and homes are coming together in their efforts to train children, she said, because they are emotionally in tune, both feeling the dependence of the small child. Schools are evaluating themselves in terms of study of the mutual needs of childhood.

Dr. Betzner addressed an audience of nearly 100, gathered in the school gymnasium. She was introduced by Mrs. Keith Merrill, president of the board of trustees, who later entertained in her honor at tea at her home, 2535 Belmont road. Miss Dorothea Stillman, headmistress of the school, opened the meeting.

House Service Board Discusses Wages, Hours

Standards for 'Trainees' of Projects Include Medical Tests.

The fragrance of cakes and pies in the process of baking permeated the new Household Workers' Training Center at 400 South Capitol street yesterday as the Citizens Advisory Board of the household service project met. Mrs. Loren B. Johnson, presided as women of the committee discussed hours and wages for household workers as well as equipment in the training centers.

Several committee members volunteered to take into their homes for a week's apprenticeship girls who have completed the training course at one of the centers and are ready to be recommended for positions in domestic service. The plan of the committee is to give the girls personal supervision during this period and to report on their qualifications to be given as reference.

It was voted yesterday to require all applicants for household workers' training to undergo examination for a physician's certificate showing them to be free of tuberculosis and venereal disease.

The training provided is designed to equip the student to do cooking, laundry, cleaning and serving in a six-room house where but one servant is employed.

With the movement to train girls for household service, enabling those now unemployed because untrained to secure work, the committee is also launching a plan to establish standards for employers. A fair scale of wages and hours will be worked out to which those securing help through the training centers will be expected to adhere.

Two centers have already been established by the District of Columbia Works Administration and two more are in prospect. The present ones are for training colored girls, but one of the new centers is to be for white women.

All are being equipped with furnishings such as would be found in a home into which the girls would go as maids. Merchants of the city as well as the committee members themselves are contributing furniture, linens, electrical equipment and other necessities. Yesterday an electric iron, guest towels and dishes were donations brought to the meeting.

Miss Margaret Selvig, supervisor from the WPA staff who was present, reported that 100 girls have been placed in positions since the first training center was opened and satisfactory reports have come in on practically all. The committee plans to follow up its trainees to keep a record of their work and also to see that standard wages and hours are maintained by their employers.

Those of the committee attending the meeting yesterday included Mrs. P. W. Chappell, chairman of publicity; Mrs. S. S. # Whitney Pleads Guilty; du Pont Kin Is Quizzed

Confesses Peculations Not Even Charged; Second Indictment Due.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 14.—Richard Whitney, 49, five times president of the New York Stock Exchange, pleaded guilty today to first-degree grand larceny in the theft of $105,000 worth of securities from a trust fund in which his wife and her sister were the chief beneficiaries.

"I fully realize the gravity of what has been done, and that a penalty must be paid," the noted Wall street financier said, in a voice husky with emotion.

Reading from a prepared statement, Whitney recited a three-page list of peculations far exceeding the charges made in a grand jury indictment by District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey.

"I make this statement," he said, "in accord with my purpose to do all in my power to right the wrongs which have been done."

His voice broke and his suntanned face crimsoned as he concluded the statement.

Simultaneously, Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr., announced he would seek a second indictment against Whitney tomorrow, accusing the head of the bankrupt Richard Whitney & Co. brokerage firm of misappropriating $109,384 worth of securities owned by the New York Yacht Club. Whitney formerly was treasurer of the club.

In today's plea of guilt to the Dewey indictment, Whitney confessed having pledged customers' securities "without their authority" in return for personal bank loans. The indictment charged Whitney stole from a trust fund set up by his fater-in-law, the late George R. Sheldon. Whitney's wife, the former Gertrude Sheldon, and her sister, Mrs. Mary Sheldon Murphy, were the chief beneficiaries.

Under the statute governing first degree larceny, Whitney may be sentenced to serve from 5 to 10 years in prison.

A Federal inquiry into the firm's crash—one of six distinct investigations—disclosed today that Mrs. Marjorie Pyle Montgomery, of Wilmington, Del., a sister of Mrs. Eugene duPont, has been questioned in connection with the case.

Gregory F. Noonan, crime chief of the U. S. attorney's office, said he did not know whether Mrs. Montgomery would be called before a Federal grand jury for further questioning regarding Whitney's financial affairs.

Judge Owen Bohan set March 28 for pronouncing sentence on the Dewey indictment and, with consent of the district attorney, the defendant was continued at liberty in $35,000 bail.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Presenting its annual Lenten concert for the first time in Constitution Hall, the First Congregational Church Choir gained an advantage which has hitherto been lacking in smaller auditoriums where the tone did not have space for free flight. That was unquestionably one reason why the excellently trained group made a deeper impression than ever before, while another contributing cause was the increase of experience under the direction of Ruby Smith Stahl. Certainly the organization of mixed voices never sang better than it did last evening in a program that fully displayed its merits. Not the least of these was the sustention of pitch which is the final test in singing a cappella.

The opening group of compositions offered many contrasts in style between the fresh Anglicism of William Byrd's "Ave Verum Corpus," the serenity of Palestrina's "Gloria Patri," the sturdy faith of Bach's "If By His Spirit," and the modern writing in Mabel Daniels' "Christmas in the Wood" and Noble Cain's "The Music of Life."

Samuel Richard Gaines' setting of "The Lord's Prayer" began the second group, which included Geoffrey Shaw's "How Far Is It To Bethlehem," Schubert's "Gott ist mein Hirt," sung by the male voices in English, as "God Is My Guide," Dorothy Radde Emery's "Thou Art My God," LeRoy Wetzel's "Ave Maria," and Charles Wood's "Glory, Honor and Laud." Mrs. Emery's motet is an admirable piece of polyphonic writing, soundly constructed and melodically attractive.

In the concluding group were heard a "Nunc Dimittis" and "Gloria" by Grechaninov, a "Cherubim Song," by Chaikovski; Christiansen's arrangement of "In Dulci Jubilo," Will C. Macfarlane's "Open Our Eyes," Clarence Dickinson's arrangement of the old noel, "Bring a Torch, Jeannette," Trowbridge's "Grace Be Unto You," for male voices, and Nobel Cain's effective arrangement of the spiritual, "Roll, Chariot."

Contending against inclement weather, the concert deserved a larger attendance. One was pleased to note the large number of young people in the balcony learning to appreciate the beauty of unaccompanied singing.

Vote to Test Farm Control By Government

If Quotas Are Approved, Federal Powers Will Be Greatly Enlarged.

New York, March 14.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co. says today:

"The first real test of the new Federal farm program will be the current referendum among cotton and tobacco farmers for the purpose of obtaining their approval of the marketing quotas recently proclaimed for each of these commodities. If the quotas are approved, the Government will be in a position to swing into action with drastic powers of control over the Nation's food and fiber supply and over the fortunes of the farmers. There is not a single member of the country's population who will not be affected in one way or another.

"Broad as the measure may be, however, it represents no new departure in the field of crop control. There is nothing in it that has not been tried before. It is a collection of all of the farmers-aid experiments witnessed over a period of years, broadened and tightened until every phase of agriculture has been covered to some extent.

"Although the act makes specific provision for control of five crops—corn, wheat, cotton, tobacco and rice, it will also affect the dairy farmers, livestock raisers and growers of the lesser crops such as vegetables, fruits and nuts. It completely overshadows the old AAA and undoubtedly is the most significant piece of social and economic legislation ever enacted in this country.

"There is good reason to believe that, in time, the cost of the new program will be heavy—much higher than that in the past. The peculiar quota provisions on cotton may require the Government to take a heavy loss on its present cotton holdings. The provision for parity payments leaves the way open for Congressional "pork-barrel" generosity. It is also conceivable that farmers may encounter a few years of good yields and be forced to store much produce of the farm under Federal loans."

Hearing on Move To Stop Trams Set

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday ordered a public hearing to consider abandonment of street car service on the Eighth and F street northeast line.

The order followed a petition last week by the Capital Transit Co. requesting the discontinuance of the service on California street, Second street and F street northeast, between Union Station Plaza and Eighth and F streets.

It was further stated that there has long been under consideration by the commission and the company abandonment of street car tracks on this line west of Georgetown. Hence, the commission ordered an investigation into the advisability of abandonment of the street car tracks on the Potomac Heights-Cabin John line west of Georgetown.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Cubertson

I strongly recommend that average players devote more attention to their "timing" in the play of the hand. I cannot point out too often that one trick is not like another—that the time element qualifies, and sometimes nullifies, what appears to be a certain winner. Let us follow the play of two declarers handling the same cards in a match-point duplicate game.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.
Match-point duplicate.

North: ♠ J 9 6 2 ♡ J 9 7 ◇ Q ♣ A J 8 5 2
West: ♠ A 7 3 ♡ K 8 5 2 ◇ J 6 5 4 3 ♣ 7
East: ♠ K 8 5 4 ♡ 6 4 3 ◇ A 7 2 ♣ 8 6 3
South: ♠ Q 10 ♡ A Q 10 ◇ K 10 9 8 ♣ K Q 10 4

The bidding:

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 N T | Pass | 2 N T | Pass |
| 3 N T | Pass | Pass | Pass |

West opened his fourth best diamond. East smothered the queen, and returned the seven spot. At both tables declarer played the ten on the second trick. West won the jack and continued with a third round of diamonds.

At this point the two declarers went separate ways. One of them, winning with the king, led a low club to dummy's nine and sent the heart jack through, his idea being, of course, that even two heart tricks would insure the contract, since five clubs and two diamonds were in sight. This declarer's figuring was wrong, however. West won with the heart king and then, since he, too, could count declarer's probable tricks, promptly laid down the spade ace, his once chance being, as he said it, that he could find East with the spade king. East signaled with the eight, and the two spade tricks taken by the defenders, added to their two diamonds and one heart, resulted in the contract's defeat.

The other declarer took a different and more logical view of the matter. Winning the third diamond with the king, he entered dummy with a club, but to lead a heart—he led a low spade! Admittedly, if East had made a brilliant play at this point, this declarer would have been no more successful than the other. Had East boldly put up the spade king and returned a heart the defenders would have established five tricks for themselves. But it should be noted, first, that this involved a master play by East and, second, that, even if East made the play, declarer would still win if the heart finesse worked—the same condition upon which the other declarer depended. As it happened, East was not a good enough player to put up the spade king. He ducked and the queen drove out West's ace. West was then helpless. He made as good a return as possible, namely, a diamond, but declarer won and laid down the spade queen, thus establishing dummy's jack and nine.

Indian House Witness Is Listed as Missing

Clem P. Secundo, 44-year-old California Indian, was listed among the missing persons by police last night, after friends reported they had been unable to locate him for two days.

He is scheduled to testify before the House Indian Affairs Committee this morning, regarding a proposal to allow Indians to sell property. He was living at 15 Third street northeast, and had not been home since Saturday.

Citizens Urge April 1 Auto Registration

Change Would Benefit Merchants $500,000, Sponsors Hold.

The Stanton Park Citizens Association last night urged that the date for auto registrations in the District be set at April 1 instead of January 1.

Such a measure, members asserted, would mean an additional $50,000 annually in gasoline taxes and an additional $50,000 annually in gasoline taxes and an additional $500,000 spent with local merchants during the Christmas season. It was pointed out that many motorists put up their cars during the first months of the year because of the inroads made on their pocketbooks by Christmas spending.

A Capital Transit Co. proposal to abandon street car service from Union Station to Eighth and F streets northeast, was protested by the association. Other resolutions were adopted asking that a traffic survey be made at Third Street and Massachusetts avenue northeast, where confusion is caused by streetcars turning from the avenue into D street, and that easily visible one-way street signs be erected on Sixth street at Massachusetts avenue northeast.

The association tabled a resolution opposing a House bill which would create a flag for the District. Those sponsoring the resolution declared that a District flag would be meaningless. They held that a flag stands for sovereignty and that there is little enough for that in Washington.

Southeast Business

The Southeast Businessmen's Association, meeting at 314 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, last night urged House and Senate conferees on the District appropriation bill to retain the appropriation for a new Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge.

The association voted to oppose a bill setting up a recreational board for the District, on the ground that present supervision is unobjectionable.

The organization reiterated its favor of a sales tax.

Hillcrest Citizens

The Capital Transit Co. was requested by the Hillcrest Citizens Association, meeting last night at East Washington Heights Baptist Church, to route express buses to Hillcrest through Randle Highlands during rush hours. The association also urged that a pool at Thirty-second place and U street southeast, held a danger to children, be drained, and that Branch avenue from Alabama avenue to the District line be made an arterial highway.

Representative James J. Quinn (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, addressed the association on taxation. He urged the plan in Pittsburgh under which land and improvements are taxed equally. Under this plan, he said, property owners holding unimproved lots bear a proportionate share of the taxation burden, relieving the small home owner.

Park View Citizens

A protest against the use of parkometers in Washington was registered at the meeting of the Park View Citizens Association. In a resolution advising against installation of the meters here, members declared they would take up space ordinarily utilized for short-time parking. A total of 23 new members was admitted to the association.

Kenilworth Citizens

The Kenilworth Citizens Association named three delegates to attend the District Suffrage Association meeting Friday night. The representatives appointed are Mrs. Edna L. Johnston, the president of the association; Hobart H. MacCubbin and George W. Hodgkins.

West End Citizens

The West End Citizens Association adopted a resolution asking that any memorial to Thomas Jefferson be situated where it will not affect the Japanese cherry trees.

Students submitted briefs in the case, on appeal in a bank robbery which the defendant admitted.

Counsels for the government were C. F. Gravel, Joseph Alioto, Thomas Dailey, Francis Guinan and Stephen McNichols. Appelant's counsels were Robert Hays, William Schloth, Francis Sincavage, John Moore and Edward Stauffer. The winning team will represent Catholic University at the Conference of Eastern Law Students, at Philadelphia on Saturday.

Workers in Symphony Orchestra Campaign To Learn Result of Drive for $103,000 Today

More than 1,000 volunteers, who have been working for three weeks to raise $103,000 for the National Symphony Orchestra, will learn the orchestra's fate at a luncheon at the Carlton Hotel this noon.

Final reports of the drive will be announced at that time. Leaders have said the orchestra would be forced to discontinue if the estimated 1938-1939 budget is not subscribed, and that contributions will be returned if the entire amount is not collected.

Up to yesterday noon $90,440 had been reported by various committees, most of whom have been working since the drive was announced February 23. This is a $12,000 increase over the total pledged by March 7, originally the closing date for the drive, when it was decided to extend the canvas for eight days.

Efforts to collect the necessary $3,000 have been redoubled in the last week, campaign leaders said yesterday. They reported that newsboys were soliciting contributions on their newspaper routes, office workers were canvassing fellow employes, housewives were making house-to-house campaigns in their own neighborhoods and school children were sending in their savings.

A typical contribution, leaders of the drive said, was from Miss Anne F. Hose, principal of Chevy Chase Elementary School, who sent $31.52 collected by her pupils.

"A large part of the money," her letter said, "was earned by the children or saved from their allowances. They raked leaves, wiped dishes, made beds, ran errands, fed the cat and the dog, swept the floor, dusted and so forth."

Under the leadership of Earl Nash, local business men, the informal committee organized after a concert on March 6, combined with a special newspaper and radio appeal, had collected $2,000.

District's Health Department 'Inefficient,' Says Rep. Quinn

Attributing the District's high death rate to "the inefficient Health Department," Representative James L. Quinn (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, told a meeting of Washington barbers last night that "Congress pays no attention to you because to them you're not worth anything in votes."

In Congress, "it's a question of log-rolling," Quinn said, declaring that lack of franchise causes Washington to be neglected.

Quinn, who spoke on behalf of a local barbers' licensing bill which will be considered by the Senate this week, described the proposal as aiming at "the improvement of business and the protection of health of the people engaged in the business and of every person who walks into the shop."

Already passed by the House, the measure, if accepted, will be the first barbers' licensing act in the District.

Quinn and J. W. Weibel, vice president of the Journeymen Barbers' International Union of America, A. F. of L. affiliate, urged on the barbers the need for organization. Fred Winstead, president of Local No. 239, was chairman of the meeting, which was held at Typographical Temple, 423 G street northwest.

Woman Left $30,000 By Detroit Physician

Miss Anna Scotten Pendleton, of 1919 Biltmore street northwest, was left $30,000 in the will of Dr. R. Adlington Newman, of Detroit, Mich., the Associated Press reported last night.

The will, probated yesterday, listed real estate valued at more than $1,000,000 and personal property at $2,000,000. The bulk of the estate was bequeathed to two of Dr. Newman's sisters.

Recreational Bill Scored by D.C. Agencies

School, Planning Body Heads Agree Co-ordination Needed.

Advisability of a co-ordinated public recreation program for the District was discussed yesterday before the Council of Social Agencies. Speakers agreed that co-ordination was needed, but disapproved a bill recently introduced in the Senate creating a recreation board to supervise playgrounds and other facilities.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, chairman of the Board of Education, expressed the board's disapproval of the bill, which is now in the Senate District Committee, and announced a meeting would be held tomorrow on possible modifications.

She emphasized that individual properties and personalities must remain in the background. "All of us must pledge ourselves to the use of all facilities at hand," she said. "We must be ingenious enough to make these facilities available to as many people as possible. And we must keep before us not the details but the ideals of the program."

Awaiting Recommendations.

A statement sent by District Commissioner George E. Allen reported the Commissioners have received the bill and are awaiting recommendations from agencies involved before acting on it.

Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, reviewed the 14-year-old playground movement here, declaring the problem grows larger every year. Not only is population increasing but areas suitable for playground development are disappearing, he pointed out.

The commission's ideal, according to Delano, would be to establish 23 large playgrounds and 125 smaller ones. "No one should have to go more than a quarter of a mile to find a recreation area," he said.

The chief obstacle in the way of co-ordination so far has been that each group has a different viewpoint on how it should be done, he added.

Favors Co-ordination.

Arno B. Cammerer, director of the National Park Service, also spoke in favor of increased co-ordination.

The pending Senate bill, introduced by Senator William H. King, proposes a board consisting of the District Commissioner in charge of public welfare, the superintendent of schools, the superintendent of the National Capital Parks, the chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and a citizen appointed by the District Commissioners.

The bill empowers the board to "conduct, maintain and supervise a comprehensive public recreation system" and to appoint a co-ordinator of recreation. Principal objection to the measure is that it would tend to consolidate rather than co-ordinate local recreation.

Man's Bones Found Near Hotel in D. C.

Police were puzzled for a bit last night after finding a bag of bones near the Shoreham Hotel.

Contained in a canvas bag were a leg, an arm, and the backbone of a human being. After a thorough investigation by the coroner it was temporarily decided that maybe a local medical student had left his homework on the street.

The bag was found on Twenty-fourth street, between Calvert and Connecticut avenue by Private D. W. Moore, of the Eighth Precinct.

Holy Soldiers Call the Cops, 'Angel' Jailed

So Sister Walker Goes to Lockup for Twice Whooping It Up.

Smoldering factional differences at the House of Prayer, Sixth and N streets northwest, finally flared into open warfare last night and one sister finished out her prayer in the Woman's Bureau of the Police Department.

It seems there are two rival orders among worshippers at the House of Prayer. The Holy Soldiers line up on one side of vital issues, the Holy Angels on the other. Last night there were no vital issues at stake but the old rivalry was there just the same.

So, when Sister Acri Walker, colored, 28, of 1240 O street northwest, a Holy Angel, permitted herself to become unduly moved over the prospects of salvation and announced her feelings in a series of whoops, the Holy Soldiers objected. One Holy Soldier went so far as to call the cops and Privates J. L. Rinker and A. W. Taylor, of Second Precinct, responded in a scout car. They calmed Sister Walker and departed.

Fifteen minutes later the Holy Soldiers put in another call for reinforcements and Rinker and Taylor again were dispatched to the House of Prayer. Again they found Sister Walker proclaiming her state of grace in clarion tones and the Holy Soldiers objecting. They took Sister Walker along to the Woman's Bureau.

She was charged with disturbin a religious service.

Elmer A. Warner, 19, of North Laurel, Md., was slightly injured last night on Maryland avenue, Hyattsville, when his automobile struck a cable supporting a telephone pole, climbed up the cable and came to rest leaning against the pole in an almost vertical position. The front end of the machine was in the air.

Warner was treated at Casualty Hospital for chest injuries. Two women passengers in the car escaped unhurt.

Sen. Capper Assails D.C. 'Vassaldom'

City Victim of 138-Year Mistake, Columbia Society Told.

A picture of Washington filled with "people of full political stature but only citizens in embryo" living under "a benevolent vassaldom" was painted by Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, before the Columbia Historical Society at the Mayower Hotel last night. His subject was "The City of Washington and the Missing Rights of Its People."

Senator Capper traced the history of the District from a howling wilderness to its present position among world capitals. During that time of growth, he said, the Nation's Capital "has been the victim of a national mistake now 138 years old" except for four years when the District sent one representative to Congress.

"The present voteless status of the citizens of the District," he sad, "is due, in great part, to a meeting held by a grumbling band of starving, penniless men in Philadelphia on a June day in 1783."

Congress' Fear Blamed.

This incipient mutiny of unpaid Revolutionary soldier, he said, so frightened Congress that it determined then and there to dominate forever the seat of Federal Government. As a result of that incident, Senator Capper said, a Federal District was established and its control by Congress written into the Constitution.

"And what relationship do your citizens bear to the District and the Nation?" he asked. "Does the District receive the same constitutional guarantees that are given citizens of the States?"

No Voice in Taxes.

"You are taxed by and through Congress without any voice in the method of taxation . . . You are deprived of suffrage; denied the right to sue in the Federal courts; you have no voice in the selection of high official positions in the municipal government . . .

"You pay the same taxes as are paid by the citizens of other States and more than most of the States; you serve in emergency the same armed forces . . . You are denied a vote or voice in the election of a President or Vice President."

Government as it obtains in Washington, Senator Capper said, "may be better than that enjoyed by other municipalities, but it is exceptional, un-American and indefensible."

First-Nighters Are Enthused By 'Whiteoaks'

New Barrymore Vehicle Is Interesting Drama of Three Generations.

By Nelson B. Bell

—THE CAST—

Adeline Whiteoak (Gran).....Ethel Barrymore
Aunt Augusta.....Lenore Chippendale
Uncle Nicholas.....Reynolds Denniston
Uncle Ernest.....Wyrley Birch
Renny.....Robert Shayne
Meg.....Olive Reeves Smith
Piers.....Richard Carlson
Finch.....Stephen Haggard
Wakefield.....Robert Gilbert
Pheasant.....Ethel Colt
Mr. Patton.....Joseph Roeder
Boney.....A Parrot
Merlin (Renny's Spaniel).....Rex

In fashioning her play of "Whiteoaks" from her own series of novels dealing with the Whiteoaks family and their ancestral home of Jalna, in Ontario, Mazo de la Roche has had the courage to eschew the usual extravagances of the modern theater and hew close to the line of dramatic integrity.

The three acts of "Whiteoaks" concern themselves little with physical action. There is no turbulence in the play; no tempestuous climaxes, save those that spring from the psychological conflict of three generations of the same family, living in the same house under the quiet but inflexible dominance of a centenarian grandmother, whose Spartan spirit and wisdom of the years have not been wholly inherited by her descendants.

The contrasts, the cross-purposes and the subtleties of character revealed in her contemplation of many generations of the same stock supply an ample groundwork for the author's placid but brilliantly illuminating canvas of a tribe of self-centered individualists, with the single common aim of coming into "Gran's" fortune upon her death. Miss de la Roche has etched her characters, and therefore her drama, with deep penetration.

The "Guests" at Jalna.

For the characters in her present work, Miss de la Roche has chosen Adeline Whiteoak, the 101-year-old matriarch of the family; three of her children and five of her grandchildren. Her daughter, Augusta, Lady Buckley, and her two elderly sons, Nicholas and Ernest, along with the children of a deceased son by two marriages, as the play opens, all are living in penurious luxury as "guests" of Renny, the grandson who inherited the estate of "Julna," while his revered grandmother remained in possession of the family fortune.

The "odd one" of the family is Finch, half-brother of Renny, whose sensitive nature rebels at the stables, horse shows and riding to the hounds but finds infinite solace in the charm of music and the vague ambition to become a great artist at the pianoforte.

A strange and inexplicable affinity springs up between "Gran" and this diffident "throwback" to an unknown strain in the Whiteoaks family. Through the thin veil of his diffidence, inhibited longings and repugnance at the lusty open-air occupations of his brothers and uncles, "Gran" discovers that in his own vagrant and shy way the lad has what she vigorously proclaims as "guts." A vast affection develops between them.

When "Gran" dies over a game of backgammon with the family solicitor—which she has won, not by the points of the game, but by the indomitable spirit that would never condone defeat—it is found upon the reading of her eighth and last "final will and testament" that she has left her entire fortune, "not to be sliced up like a cake," to Finch. The last act of the three is devoted to the family rebellion that is precipitated by this "outrage" against every consideration of fairness and justice. And so the play ends.

Miss Barrymore is Courageous.

In assuming the role of Adeline Whiteoak, Ethel Barrymore displays a courage no less impressive than the author's. Her assumption of the role of the aged dowager recalls the earlier day when this brilliant star was willing also to submerge her compelling beauty and the richness of one of the theater's most glorious voices in the role of "Scarlet Sister Mary." Her "Gran" is a lace-capped and black-shawled characterization in which all of the rich Barrymore endowments are disguised, save only that flaming zest for worthy interpertation that long has stamped her as one of America's foremost actresses. She plays the pivotal character of the play with a sly sense of humor, a vigorous note of authority and a consistent faithfulness that won repeated curtain calls at the fall of the final curtain.

Scarcely less can be said of the finely shaded performance of Finch, contributed to the play by Stephen Haggard, the young English actor, who also was responsible for its direction. Mr. Haggard is a sentient and wistful player, whose esthetic features, frailty of body and emotional intensity completely realize the demands of the part in which he is cast. There is a plaintive and restrained eagerness in all that he does that is immensely effective.

Balanced Support.

The supporting cast is one of even balance, if not conspicuous brilliance. The play, indeed is one that lays down no demand for brilliance or any of the flamboyant sucstitutes that sometimes are mistaken for it. Robert Shayne, as Renny; Richard Carlson, as Piers; Ethel Colt, as Pheasant, and Lenore Chippendale, Reynolds Denniston and Wyrley Birch, in the elder roles, did agreeably and well all that was demanded of them.

The youngest of the Whiteoaks, Wakefield, is effectively impersonated for this engagement by "Robert" Gilbert, in deference to the District's unconscionable child labor law that prohibits a real male juvenile's playing the part.

"Whiteoaks," in summation, is a fine example of an infrequent, but by no means outmoded, type of domestic drama. Last evening's large audience found it acutely interesting.

Radio, Stage and Screen Have Been Tapped for "In Person" Bookings; Film Releases Are of Exceptionally High Order; Oscar Doob Pays a Visit; Mr. Greneker Heralds a Hit in "You Never Know;" "Mayerling" Is a Timely Film; Theater Notes.

DIVISION Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc., and his associate executives in the conduct of the Loew theaters in Washington are practically all agog. In fact, they are practically agog-and-a-half, or maybe two agogs!

BELL.

There seems to be a reason for their excitement and it has something to do with the persistent queries of "What has become of vaudeville?" and "Why don't we have more good pictures?". Mr. Barron and his cohorts think they can answer both questions, with a little tangible evidence on the side.

Take the matter of stage attractions, for example. For the immediately impending weeks of early spring, many of the foremost "names" in the amusement world appear on the dotted lines of contracts calling for their services on the stage of Loew's Capitol Theater during the remainder of March, the month of April and at least a part of May.

The order in which these stellar personalities will appear is not known to this column at this time—and possibly not to Mr. Barron, either—but all of them will be coming along, at one time or another, during the specified period.

The procession will start this Friday, when Jimmy Scribner, the Norfolk, Va., lad who has made a bit of a name for himself on the radio as a "one-man show"—much as Joe Cook did in the old days of the two-a-day, when vaudeville was vaudeville—will headline the new stage revue. Jimmy has received some 14,000 fan letters from nearby dialists as evidence of the hold his work through the microphones has taken on the listener-inners.

Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians are not far away. They have been local favorites ever since the first time they played the old Crandall's Metropolitan, 'way back yonder in the early '20's. And Allen Jones, too, will be in the line of march—or April, as the case may be. The golden voiced tenor of "The Firefly" and "Everybody Sing," is definitely booked. So are George Jessel and Norma Talmadge, who have not been seen locally for two or three seasons now. Clyde McCoy and his Sugar Blues Orchestra comprise another inclusion in the parade.

Then there will be Patricia Bowman, Washington's premier danseuse, in a spectacular revue; Leah Ray, who has appeared in many pictures since she graduated as soloist with Phil Harris' orchestra; Paul Gerritts, who did such a fine job of mastering ceremonies at the midnight shows celebrating the President's birthday; Count Berni Vici with one of the most colorful extravaganzas he ever has brought to town, and an equally picturesque stage production to be known by the name of "Waikiki Nights."

That would seem to offer a fair answer as to what may have become of vaudeville. A good deal of it seems to be headed for the Capitol.

Now about those better pictures. How would you like a list that would include "The Goldwyn Follies," of which perhaps too much already has been said in this space; "Sally, Irene and Mary," taken, of course, from the successful stage musical comedy; Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, in "The Girl of the Golden West;" the widely heralded, "In Old Chicago;" "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," in Technicolor; Gary Cooper, in "The Adventures of Marco Polo," which introduces a new screen personality in Sigrid Gurie; Clark Gable, Myrna Loy and Spencer Tracy, in "Test Pilot;" Shirley Temple, in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm;" Bing Crosby, in "Dr. Rhythm," and Robert Montgomery and Virginia Bruce, in "The First Hundred Years?"

Well, they are coming along, too, to the Loew screens—at what houses they are to be shown, I wouldn't know, but Loew's Capitol, Palace and Columbia are only a couple of blocks apart, so what difference does it make?

• • • •

Just as Oscar Doob, director of advertising and publicity for the Loew theaters, remarked during a pleasant confab on Sunday night, when he was Mr. Barron's guest of honor at dinner at the Variety Club, this spring will prove productive of more first-grade screen entertainment that has found its way to the silver sheets of the country during a like period in recent years. There is not a major producing company on the West Coast that has not two or more releases of superlative merit about ready to "break." Mr. Doob is jubilant over the outlook. Not all of the good pictures are the product of his company's affiliate, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, but that makes no difference. As long as anybody makes good pictures, it is a salutary thing for the entire industry. When everybody begins making them at once, the situation begins to take on something the color of the millenium. Okay, Oscar, we can do with a little of the millenium!

In view of recent events in Central Europe, there is a peculiar timeliness in the selection of "Mayerling" to signalize the reopening tonight of the Belasco Theater under new management. The story deals with the tragic deaths of Austria's Crown Prince Rudolph and his inamorata, Maria Vetsera, in the former's hunting lodge on the outskirts of Vienna. For 50 years the Mayerling tragedy has been shrouded in a thick veil of mystery and has served as inspiration for many novelists and dramatists.

The "Mayerling" to be seen in the Belasco Theater tonight at 8:30, for the first time in Washington, was designated by the Critics' Circle of New York the finest foreign-made motion picture of 1937. It was directed by Anatole Litvak and costars Charles Boyer and Danielle Darrieux, the youthful French star—she is only 21—whose work in this picture brought her a $1,000,000 contract with Universal. She now is in Hollywood, as so, also, of course, is Mr. Boyer, whose Napoleon in "Conquest," with Greta Garbo, still is a vivid memory.

After tonight's initial presentation, on a reserved seat basis, "Mayerling" will be shown continuously daily at a popular scale of prices, in conformity with the usual house policy.

So another trick ballyhoo stunt arrives at the desk. This time it is a conventional apothecary's pill-box containing five cerise capsules that are denominated a "Prescription for 'Love Is a Headache.'" That would be the film coming into the Columbia on Friday. One of the capsules, I note, is filled with something. The other four are as empty as some of Ray Bell's—no relation—other jokes! If I have to take any, I'll take one of the empty ones, knowing the antic other Mr. Bell as I do! But I wonder what's in that fifth one? Well, you know what killed the cat. It's only a piece of paper bearing this formula: "One part Gladys George comedy; one part Franchot Tone romance. Mix well and shake with laughter." As far as I can see, that wouldn't hurt anybody.

• • • •

Having missed a call from Claude P. Greneker, that right arm of the Shuberts to whom frequent reference has been made of late, I rely on a note left on my desk for the last word as to what Washington theatergoers may expect at the National next Monday night when "You Never Know," the new Cole Porter musical comedy is unfurled here for the first time.

"The show, which I've seen twice," says Mr. Greneker, "is a world-beater. Never have seen such business. I guess it's the combination of Cole Porter and those stars."

"Those stars," as you must know by now, are Clifton Webb, Libby Holman and Lupe Velez, with Toby Wing and Rex O'Malley featured in the next line of type. The prosperity of "You Never Know" has impinged the Messrs. Shubert on the horns of a dilemma, as the saying goes. They want to take the piece directly into New York and they also want to keep it on the road to avail themselves of the prodigious "out-of-town" business it is doing.

What to do?

• • • •

In case you have been wondering what those "usual short screen subjects" are that are supplementing the third week's showing of "Peter the First," at the Little Theater, here goes: Robert Benchley's abbreviated classic, "The Romance of Digestion" and Walt Disney's cartoon in color, "Three Orphan Kittens." So now you know

Haberdashery Note.

Personal aside to the anonymous correspondent who wants a new likeness niched into the top of this column: No, I don't still wear that funny-looking collar, but you ought to see what time has done to the face! Better let well-enough alone.

Coming to Washington Theaters

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, March 14.

FOR a number of months, the La Follette Committee in Washington has been receiving one letter a day from a woman in the Midwest complaining about the introduction of foreign words into the American language. No attention was paid to these letters . . . Last week another such letter arrived. "It's about time," the lady complained, "that we Americans stop kow-towing to these alien, subversive influences upon our langauge" . . . "My dear lady," came the reply, "regarding your letters, please be informed that 'kow-tow' is a Chinese word."

THE promoters of the benefit concert staged at the Metropolitan Opera House this week phoned the C. B. S. Artists Bureau and asked for the services of a concert pianist. Leith Stevens was suggested. "He used to be accompanist for Mme. Schumann-Heink," the promoters were told . . . The C. B. S. Artist Bureau neglected to inform that Stevens also is the conductor of the Saturday Night Swing Club. And that's why the occupants of the Diamond Horseshoe at the Met were amazed—when Schumann-Heink's accompanist played "Bei Mir Bist Du Schoen."

MIKE ROMANOFF, now employed by the Hollywood studios, confessed to Jimmy Durante that he is no longer delighted about his screen career . . . "G'wan," Durante told him, "you're kidding. At least you're getting some money" . . . "Ah, money," Romanoff sighed. "Money is all right—but one wastes too much time earning it."

"MY HUSBAND, John Steel, still gets $1,000 a week for singing 'A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody,'" writes Janette Hackett. "But he was a big-hearted chump, and got the worst of it, singing in that Brooklyn theater—where acts are broken in, and shown to prospective bookers. I was engaged to dance there with 12 girls, who are dependent upon me for bookings. The management promised to furnish a vocalist to sing 'A Pretty Girl.' On the morning we were to open, I discovered that the singer never even heard of the song. So John—who was paid $2,000 a week by Ziegfeld—saved the day for all of us, by singing the song from backstage."

THE APPLICATION to be made by Homer Martin to the RFC, for a loan by the U. A. W., to purchase and operate an auto factory now idle, will be in the sum of $5,000,000. A composing-room error made that sum appear to be 5 billion . . . Yale's Junior Prom will be photographed by the picture magazines. It was selected over Princeton, because the Tigers refused to permit flash-light bulbs . . . A new dining establishment will be opened at East 52d street next month and will be called The Elbow Room. Among its sponsors will be Alexander Woollcott and Mrs. George S. Kaufman. Membership will be by invitation only . . . Mayor Hague will be heckled by a new revue, "Jersey City Scandals," which will be presented at the Shubert Theater in Newark, May 21, and then will tour throughout the State of New Jersey.

EDNA FERBER returned to Hollywood in the back seat of an ancient Ford car. Her train had stopped in Pasadena, because of the floods. She caw a youngster driving a battered old car, leaned out of the window, and shouted to him. The lad stopped, and within two minutes Miss Ferber and her trunks were in the back seat . . . Francis Lederer, who was mentioned for the prizefighter role in the coast production of "Golden Boy," took boxing lessons from Charley Massera, the heavyweight fighter. "Well," Lederer asked him, "now do I look the part?" . . . "Yes, you look the part all right," Massera admitted, "but—but don't start up with anybody."

FRANK CRAVEN recently attended his first Equity meeting in many years. He listened to the vehement arguments, and then shouted: "Please, please—if we can't all be good actors, let us at least be gentlemen" . . . Secretary of the Navy Swanson keeps a record of all the witty statements he makes. A recent entry in that record concerns the visit of Bob Jackson of the Democratic National Committee. Jackson found Swanson in conference with a Senator, and started to leave, until Swanson stopped him. Jackson struck a pose, and waited. The Secretary of the Navy stared at him, and said: "Bob, when they unveil you, I want to make the dedication."

ARTURO TOSCANINI made two recordings this week before he sailed for Europe. At the first recording, Berkanholz, violinist of the N. B. C. orchestra, approached him and said: "Maestro, here is the music for Beethoven's Seventh Symphony. It's puzzled me for ten years. There's one part that always sounded strange to me. I believe it to be an error in the print" . . . Toscanini, famed for his memorizing of scores, didn't look at the music. "Yes," he replied, "in Beethoven's Seventh—there is an error in the print."

In HOLLYWOOD With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, March 14.—Louis B. Mayer, who has pioneered in practically every branch of our business, has done it again.

HEDDA HOPPER.

Instead of bringing the foreign importations all the way to Hollywood to be looked over, he has opened a training school in Paris—with Mary Garden in charge. There they will learn not only singing, dancing and acting, but also English. And when ready, screen tests will be made there and shipped over. The cost will be much less in a tin can. And we'll have fewer broken-hearted foreigners on our hands.

It's interesting, too, that Mary Garden is given this opportunity. It was a dream, many years ago, of Isadora Duncan. In fact, she started such a school, but didn't have enough money to go on with it. That was long before motion picture executives started to dream.

Mimosa Tells 'Em.

Bob Kalloch, first designer to put sex appeal into Irene Dunne's clothes—and doing the same for Katharine Hepburn in "Holiday"—gave Mary Garden a farewell dinner in his charming apartment. It's filled with antiques which he and his mother garnered from all corners of the globe.

The dinner was extra special, even for Hollywood. But maybe I'd better let Bob's favorite companion, who lives with him, tell the story. So here goes—from Mimosa, the beautiful, stray black cat Bob picked up years ago on Madison avenue, New York, who is horribly jealous of all the attention Bob gives his guests.

Mimosa: "The idea of going to such fuss for a woman who used to sing in opera. Yes, I know—after a gala performance and her feline walk at the opera, they'd pelt her with flowers until she stood knee deep in them. So what? I thought I'd done with all that back East. I came out here for a little quiet. Why, the whole place has been upset for days. And I've shoved off to a back room and given nothing but milk. My master even forgot my chicken livers.

Champagne for Garden.

"The bowls of red roses looked lovely, but they weren't good enough for Bob. He had to go out and spend more money and get dozens of bunches of violets which he tossed among them. And the Easter lilies! He sent all the way to San Francisco and by airplane came the longest, bluest delphiniums to act as background for them.

"And the food—my word! Two special chefs prepared it. How silly. And most of his guests on a diet, too. And he had to have vintage champagne. There aren't ten people in a thousand who know the difference. But, I suppose Mary does. I bet I'll be put on skimmed milk for a week. Oh, well, tomorrow I'll have the house my own way again and another Hollywood party will have gone the way of all parties. Meow! You! Scat . . . Now I feel better, anyway."

This Morning

Blue Plate Special, or Potpourri

By Shirley Povich.

Orlando, Fla. To Whom It May Concern: Wes and Rick Ferrell, the Nats' brother battery, are partners in a dog-food manufacturing plant at Oxford, N. C. . . . it's a very special canine cuisine—for hunting dogs . . . one bite and your Spitz pup will give battle to a wild cat . . . Arthur Mann, who authored Bill Terry's Saturday Evening Post tirade against baseball writers, elaborates on baseball topics in general in another literary effort . . . and describes Bucky Harris as the frankest of all big league managers . . . Mann declares he took Harris' advice and picked the Yankees to win the pennant in 1926 after Bucky realized that his own two-time pennant-winner was falling apart.

POVICH.

Gerald Walker is building a home at Lakeland, Fla., winter headquarters of the Detroit Tigers . . . somebody ought to tell the poor fellow he was traded by the Tigers to the White Sox last fall . . . Clark Griffith, who would like to make the Kuhel-Bonura swap with the White Sox, turned down the offer last October . . . Within the past year Griffith has claimed Roy Weatherly, diminutive Cleveland outfielder, seven times, but Cleveland has always refused to release Weatherly . . . The Washington contract of Joe Kohlman, rookie pitcher, represents an increase of 600 per cent more than his salary in 1937 . . . when he drew only $475 for his season's play with Salisbury in the Eastern Shore League.

The Boston Red Sox are still hopeful of swinging a deal that will bring them Pitcher Mel Harder, of the Indians . . . they may dispatch Holdout Second Baseman Eric McNair to the Cleveland Club in the trade . . . in an attempt to crack down on holdouts, the American League has issued an order forbidding unsigned players to work out in the training camp of any club in organized baseball . . . but with a fine disregard for the order Joe DiMaggio is conditioning himself by joining the practice sessions of the Los Angeles team.

Bucky Harris, the boy wonder of 1924-25, will be 42 years old in May . . . with the exception of Connie Mack, Harris has managed the Washington club for a longer period than any other manager in the league has been identified with the clubs they are currently with . . . Harris is starting his fourth season of his second term with the Nats after piloting the team from 1924 through 1928 . . . he likes the prospects of the 1938 edition of the Nats better than those of any of the other Washington clubs of recent years . . . including his 1935 team which finished fourth.

Eddie Ainsmith, Walter Johnson's catcher in the salad days of the Big Train was slated for promotion to the American League as an umpire until Umpire In Chief Tommy Connolly scouted his work in the Southern Association . . . Ainsmith was one of the most aggressive ball players in Washington history, but Connolly found his umpiring to be listless and turned in an adverse report . . . John Quinn is the umpire assigned by the American League to the Nats during the training season . . . Quinn, a Philadelphian, is the pet of Connie Mack, who got him his American League job . . . the Yankees have 12 scouts digging up talent, the Detroit Tigers have seven and the Washington club has exactly none . . . which may explain a few things, including why the Nats for the past two years have been a sixth-place ball club.

• • • •

Several years ago at Fenway Park, a big, loose-jointed kid asked for a tryout with the Washington Club before the day's scheduled game with the White Sox and then was permitted to go on his way . . . his name was Hank Greenberg . . . Greenberg, a Bronx boy, was not overlooked by the Yankees, who offered him a $10,000 bonus to sign a contract . . . but Greenberg, knowing that first base on the Yankees would be closed to him unless an accident befell Lou Gehrig, refused to sign . . . instead he took a $9,000 offer from the Tigers, who were badly in need of a first baseman, what with such liabilities as Harry Davis and Dale Alexander attempting to hold down the job.

• • • •

The general opinion among baseball men is that if the Athletics fail to sign Outfielder Wally Moses and enter the race without him, the A's will finish so low that league officials will be compelled to take soundings to find 'em in late September . . . the presence with the Nats of Emil (Dutch) Leonard, the knuckle-balling rookie, who is of Belgian extraction, recalls that another Belgian boy unfailingly starred at Griffith Stadium . . . his name was Alphonse (Tuffy) Leemans.

A Texas city has offered Clark Griffith $5,000 to move the Washington Club's training camp to the Lone Star State, but Griffith refuses to budge from Florida . . . The New York Yankees made Griffith two offers for Pitcher Ken Chase before Griffith agreed to trade him—in exchange for Lefty Gomez . . . the Yankees then called off negotiations . . . baseball's latest romanticists: Handsome Wesley Ferrell and blond Thelma Griffith, attractive daughter of the Nats' owner.

Myer, Weaver Unhurt In Auto-Truck Crash

Clubhouse Boy Suffers Bruised Arm; Another Youth Victim of One of Jimmy DeShong's Casts; Harris May Ban Fishing.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Orlando, Fla., March 14.—Two accidents—one a freak—claimed two Washington clubhouse boys as victims today, while Second Baseman Buddy Myer and Pitcher Monte Weaver narrowly escaped injury.

Weaver's automobile crashed into a heavy truck near the Orlando city limits as he was driving Myer to a nearby lake for a fishing excursion. The second of two trucks, which Weaver attempted to pass, made a sudden left turn and the collision followed.

Weaver and Myer were miraculously unhurt as their car came to a stop against the truck amid the screeching of brakes, but Freddie Gill, a clubhouse boy, who was riding in the rumble seat, suffered a severely bruised arm.

The second of the accidents in which Nats figured also occurred on a fishing trip. Pitcher Jimmy DeShong, fishing from a boat with Pitcher Wes Ferrell on nearby Lake Harris, was maneuvering his rod and reel into casting position at a time when a clubhouse boy, Freddie Baxter, was changing positions in the boat.

Three of the hooks on DeShong's line imbedded themselves in young Baxter's scalp and the lad heroically bore the pain while DeShong and Ferrell attempted to remove the hooks. They were able to extract two, but the third was buried deep and young Baxter was rushed to the Eustis (Fla.) Hospital.

He was given an anesthetic by hospital physicians, who removed the hook and took four stitches in the wound. The lad was chipper tonight.

Manager Bucky Harris, who last week banned golf as an extra-curricular conditioner for the Nats, tonight was in a mood to ban all further fishing trips.

Joe Cambria discovered him pitching in the Canadian-American League and signed him for Albany in 1935 . . . That fall he was bought by Washington but not given a tumble in those waning weeks of the season when the Nats' bosses were concerned chiefly with another rookie named Buddy Lewis . . . Went South with the Nats in 1936 and was seen to be a big, broad-beamed, bow-legged southpaw with a hard, fast one but horrible control . . . His tryout ended when one of his fast balls hit Red Kress in the back and Manager Harris got him out of there before he could kill somebody . . . Was released to Albany early in '36 and recalled late in the season by the Nats . . . Stayed around Washington for a month after the season closed and was personally coached in the pitching art by Clark Griffith in morning workouts . . . Released to Trenton early in 1937 and with that last-place club won 14 games and lost 19 . . . He was pitching for a team that was not only last in the league, but eighth in team hitting and eighth in team fielding . . . Struck out more men than any other pitcher in the league and walked more . . . Griffith remembered him for his fast ball and ordered him

Picard, Revolta Win 4 and 3; Meet Goggin-Hogan Duo Today

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., March 14.—Henry Picard and Johnny Revolta came from behind with a par-shattering burst today to march into the semifinals of the fifteenth annual $4,000 international four-ball tournament with a 4-and-3 victory over Jimmy Hines and Victor Ghezzi.

One down after a mediocre exhibition in the morning, Picard and Revolta took command with a remarkable nine-hole 29, seven under par.

Picard started the rally of the three-time winners by rifling an approach shot within 3 feet of the nineteenth pin for an eagle 3. Playing smoothly as a team, he and Revolta clicked off birdies on five of the next six holes and went into the last nine with a four-hole lead. They coasted in from there, with Picard's 12-foot putt for a birdie 2 on the thirty-third as the finishing touch.

Willie Goggin and Ben Hogan turned back Jimmy Thomson and Harry Cooper, 2 and 1, to qualify for a semifinal berth against Re-

Owls and Colorado Gain Cage Finals

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 14.—Colorado University and Temple tonight reached the finals of the national invitation basketball tournament before a crowd of 13,000 in Madison Square Garden.

The Buffalos from the Rocky Mountain sector triumphed 48 to 47 over New York University in the last few seconds of play after Temple had steam-rollered Oklahoma A. & M., Conference, 56 to 44, in the first champions of the Missouri Valley game.

The Owls turned on the heat whenever Oklahoma threatened and defeated the Mid-Westerners with even greater as than they did Bradley Tech last week in the first rounds of the tournament.

The rangy Philadelphia team, dropping in shots from all angles, ran up an 8-0 lead before Oklahoma moved into the scoring column and had a 26-17 advantage at half time. It was the worst defeat of the season for Oklahoma, which previously had been defeated only twice in 26 games and then by 2-point margins.

The closest the Oklahomans came to Temple was in the first half when they twice got to within 4 points of tieing the count. In the second half, Temple led by margins ranging from 5 to 14 points.

Ed Boyle, of Temple, was high man with 6 field goals and 3 fouls for 15 points.

Fool Takes Semifinal From Wilson

Carino Bows to Ruby; Temes and Miller Are Victors.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Saverio Turiello, who throws more punches in a minute than a railroad conductor on an excursion train, outpointed Andrea Jessurun in a fast 10-round bout last night at Turner's Arena.

A disappointingly small audience of 1,500 fans saw the Italian win in convincing style despite the split verdict handed down. Referee Eddie La Fond and Judge Bob Eller saw eye to eye on the matter in awarding the bunting to him, but Lieut. McFarland, a newcomer to the judiciary body, developed an acute case of astigmatism along about the sixth round and called it a draw.

There were no knockdowns, not even a semblance of one, and nary a drop of blood. It was generally a game of hide-and-seek, with Jessurun concealing himself behind a large pair of protective elbows while his opponent sought an opening for his stinging rights. The Frenchman carried a nasty two-inch scar over his left eye into the ring and was extremely cautious about exposing it.

Fourth Round Best.

From a spectators' viewpoint the fourth round was the best and produced the most effective fighting. It opened in customary fashion with both gladiators crouching and exchanging elbows to the mid-section, but quickly evolved into a rousing session of slug. They squared off at arm's length and took turns slugging one another with husky rights to the head and were locked in combat at the bell.

Turiello, his face a rosy hue from the few punches Jessurun did land, his hair hanging down over his forehead like broken banjo strings, forced most of the fighting, although Jessurum did his share, and landed several effective blows. The shots were not potent enough to stop the sturdy, game Frenchman.

Jessurun Slows Down.

Turiello's best round was the sixth. He punished his opponent with three straight rights to the head without a return and caught him with twi more of the same in the mid-section as Jessurun charged in. The latter slowed up perceptibly in the round, but was fresh at the eighth bell and finished strongly.

Jessurun's best punch was a left hook that exploded on Saverio's jaw near the end of the eighth. He whipped the Italian around the body with both hands, but usually it was Turiello who had the best of the infighting. He could have drilled a hole in the average fan with his right hand.

Turiello was penalized for hitting low in the eighth, but rallied in the ninth with two good rights to the jew, again without return. Jessurun tossed three lefts to the midsection, but failed to intimidate the other lad. They mixed freely in the tenth with Jessurun still paying his left to the body, and Turiello trying to get a right in to the head.

Fool Defeats Wilson.

"Spider" Hewitt, Navy welterweight, campaigning under the name of Willie Fool, won a six-round decision over Bob Wilson in the semifinal.

Wilson waged a determined and surprisingly good fight against the highly-touted knockout artist, rocking Hewitt several times with potent left hooks to the head. The sailor's best rounds were the last two, when he punished his opponent with a two-fisted body attack. At no time, however, was Wilson in danger of being belted out.

D. C. Body Inclined To Free Amateurs From Boxing Unit

A favorable report was predicted yesterday by House District Committee members on a bill to exempt amateur collegiate boxing from control of the boxing commission.

Representative Withrow (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and Harrington (Democrat), of Iowa, indorsed the legislation, sponsored by Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia.

A. J. (Dutch) Bergman, athletic director at Catholiv University, asserted that intercollegiate boxing in every State of the Union is now free of State control.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police and chairman of the boxing commission, opposed the bill as did the District Commissioners and Dr. John R. Fitzpatrick, dean of Columbus University.

A Couple of Blows That Failed to Find the Mark in Arena Bout Last Night

Walter Haight

There's a certain facination about getting into a sports event on a pass. With some it amounts to a disease. I have friends—solid, sane hardworking, budget-balancing fellows—who will go miles out of their way to call for me at my home, buy me a $1 dinner, three bottles of pop, and a bag of peanuts in return for a buck pass to a ball game. There must be a certain amount of self-satisfaction of getting a good seat, gazing around the park or arena and counting the "suckers" who put the admission price squarely on the line.

HAIGHT.

The sports promoters have found a way to sneak into the purses of the pass hounds. They have developed a little item called the "service charge." The Washington ball club brought the pressure out gradually, starting with 10 cents daily on a season pass, raising it to 15 cents and then letting it settle, temporarily perhaps, at 25 cents.

The fight ducats have a 40-cent charge and wrestling 25 cents. The race tracks have caught the spirit of the thing and about the tops in "service charges" is the one slapped on the clubhouse badges at Hialeah Park. This is a nifty little $1.60, itemized to include State tax, Federal tax and, I guess, the remainder goes for flamingo food. In fact, this $1.60 is 25 cents more than the regular admission to the grandstand.

• • • •

The pass service-charge idea has gained momentum with leaps and bounds. Some sports promotions and theatrical ventures make more on service charges than regular admissions.

There is a type of citizen who virtually demands a pass.

I can remember a little scene between Shirley Povich and a pass seeker. Povich admitted afterward that he could not remember seeing this fellow before. He came into the sports department one night and bellowed, "How are you, Mr. Polerick?"

Shirley overlooked the gross mispronunciation of his name and asked, "What can I do for you?"

"How about a pass for the wrestling match? I know you guys get plenty of them," replied the visitor.

The intruder turned and started for the door. Just before he left he yelled, "O. K. No hard feeling, I'll be seeing you Stanley."

I had a rather temper-trying situation one day regarding passes. When the Apaches and Mohawks were the tops in semi-pro football teams hereabouts, I was more or less an Apache rooter, although I wrote about both teams and tried to give them equal breaks. The Apaches held forth at Union League Park and the Mohawks had their headquarters at the ball park.

I was given auahority to write notes as passes for Post employes and my friends. For instance, I would write on Post stationery, "Pass two to today's Mohawk-Mercury game," and sign my name. Incidentally, I put the figure "2" on one of these notes one day and a smart friend put a "1" in front of it and passed in a dozen of his Northeast cronies. But that's another story.

Although I wrote passes for the Mohawk games each week, the annual clash with the Apaches was the only one I covered. On the day of the big battle I was late in arriving at the park. I rushed up to the pass gate and found my path definitely blocked.

"I'm from The Post and I'm covering the game," I told the gateman.

"You can't get in here without a pass," he came back. "If you're from The Post you have to have a note like this."

The gateman unfolded a sheet of Post stationery and showed me one of the passes that I had written the night before.

"Well, I be darn," I protested, "I wrote that myself. I signed it, too. My name is Walter Haight."

"Yes and my name is Alexander the First," he snapped. "Stand aside and let this gentleman by."

The gentleman to whom he referred was one of The Post printers and he had one of my notes.

I finally got through the gate but only after getting Edward Eynon, the Washington Club's secretary, to identify me.

If I ever promote a fight or own a ball club, I'm going to give that gatekeeper a job.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ESPINACA, $11.20, $6.00, $4.50; ONE CHANCE, $6.50, $4.10; RITZ BROTHERS, $5.20.

ESPINACA, hustled to the front while going wide rounding the first turn, drew clear approaching the half-mile pole and held away the remainder of the trip under strong urging. ONE CHANCE, going in his best form, gradually bettered his position next to the inner rail after leaving the backstretch and outlasted RITZ BROTHERS in the final drive. RITZ BROTHERS broke poorly and was far back the early stages. He gained rapidly on the outside the final 3 furlongs and would have been second in another stride. MARTIN BARTON, hard urged and securing clear passage, was unable to get up.

The Post's All Outdoors Editor.

There is nothing definite as yet in regard to the issuance of licenses for the controlled trout fishing on Hunting Creek in the new Catoctin recreational area, above Frederick, Md., when the season opens two weeks from Friday.

However, if you have any thoughts of getting in on this fine angling, now is the time to make application to Chief Clerk of the Maryland Conservation Commission Frank L. Bentz, 516 Munsey Building Baltimore.

ACKERMAN.

The restrictions on the creek have been set—a daily creel limit of five—to be taken only with artificial lures—hooks must be barbless or mashed-down barbs. Two days out of each week, Tuesdays and Wednesdays, are set aside as rest days. On these days there will be no fishing—on all others from 6 a. m. to 7 p. m.—t—he fee will be 50 cents per day.

The stocking, which is just about completed, has been ample and of the heaviest fish in the hatcheries. When necessary replacements will be made throughout the season.

* * * *

The Virginia season, east of the Blue Ridge, on black bass closes today. Next year it will be the same on both sides, March 15, instead of December 31, as it has been for the west, in past years.

There has always been some complaint by protectionists for the east half being opened on June 15, 15 days ahead of the West, which is the same as that in other States. These dates will continue this year.

Many anglers wonder at the variance in opening, and the answer is involved, but simple when it is understood.

First there is the climatic division between the North and the South, and the line might be said to be about the same as the northern boundary of the State.

Above this line there is little doubt that the protectionists are right in their reasoning for a July 1 opening, for it is true that the males are on the nests throughout the month of june, protecting the young not only through the yolk-sac stage but the week or 10 days immediately following when they are schooled and return to the nest each night. It is equally true that females are occasionally found unspawned at this late date.

South of this line there is during most seasons an advance of the mild weather of about two weeks.

* * * *

But there is a further geographical division of east and west with about the same degree of difference in temperature and the same two weeks of time. The fast, spring-fed mountain streams are slower in warming than the slow-moving rivers and ponds of the flat tide-water country.

Then there is that difference in the kind of bass. A difference that is more marked from east to west, than from north to south. More of habitat, because under comparable conditions, each spawns in waters of about the same temperatures.

The small-mouth bass in the fast-scouring streams of the high country west of the Blue Ridge; ready to do battle throughout the warm months in the crystal-clear waters with their higher content of dissolved oxygen.

Large-mouth bass find the lower country more to their liking. More suitable to their easy going habits, the backwaters of big rivers, and the barely moving waters of the mill ponds. Waters so warm in July and August the fish are inactive—particularly so in dry seasons and the low waters that come with them. In extreme years the bottom actually working from decaying vegetable matter, the tiny particles of partially rotted excrement floating in dense clouds. Times in which even the large-mouth, which finds these waters usually so habitable, refuses to feed beyond the little absolutely necessary.

Knowing these differences from close observation of the waters both east and west of the Blue Ridge, over a period of many years, the commission, with as much thought for the fish as possible, has tried to give the anglers as near equal seasons as possible. The early 15 days, and the time between the first of the year and March 15 to make up for that time lost in midsummer.

The recent extension of time in the west means very little, for few anglers are able to take this midwinter fishing, and if they can, deserve whatever they might catch.

Pitching Staff of Nats To Be Pennant Grade For '38, Says Harris

Manager Sees Great Improvement in Hurling Department; Thinks Either Chase or Krakauskas Will Be Sensation.

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 14.—What is best described as a sneaking suspicion that the Washington club will have the more improved pitching staff in the league prevails here in the Nats' camp. And a party to that belief is Stanley Raymond Harris, who never has been a man to leap to conclusions.

For two weeks now Harris has been casting an appraising eye at the athletes who comprise his pitching department and today he was moved to the following statement:

"A team ought to win a pennant with this crew of pitchers."

Harris wasn't talking about the Washington team. He was talking in terms of teams that had more power—the Yankees and the Tigers. He isn't brash enough to predict that the Nats of 1938 could pull the pennant-winning stunt, but what he meant to convey was that the club's pitching would be no deterrent.

Harris' enthusiasm for his 1938 pitching staff revolves chiefly about the presence of his two five-star rookie left-handers—Joe Krakauskas and Ken Chase—whom he visions as the workhorses of the club.

Likes Chase, Krakauskas.

"If a club comes up with one young pitcher a year, it considers itself lucky," said Harris, "but look at our possibilities. I'll stake my reputation—whatever that is—that either Case or Krakauskas will be a sensation this season. And if they both took down a regular job, that wouldn't surprise me either. You can't dispute their records last season. They both beat the best clubs in the league.

"Wes Ferrell was a better pitcher last year than his average shows. If we had hit for him, he'd have won more than 20 games. Jimmy DeShong can beat certain clubs with regularity and Monte Weaver, who won 12 last year, is in better shape than he ever was.

"But where the rest of the league may get its surprise is in a couple of other guys on our staff. I mean Dutch Leonard and Ray Phebus. The knuckle ball is still the toughest kind of a pith to hit, and Leonard knows how to throw it. He's going to get his chance, too—something he never had when he was with Brooklyn for three years.

"But the fellow that everybody seems to be underestimating is Ray Phebus. He hasn't been getting the notices that Krakauskas and Chase and Leonard have been getting, but in my book he's a swell prospect. He probably knows more about pitching than the other three to start with, and he never has been troubled by control.

Phebus Has Courage.

"Phebus has courage, too. That's something I can say for all of these kids. Chase showed me plenty of fortitude when he stuck in there against Feller that day in Cleveland and outpitched him. And the day that he beat the Yankees, 2-1, before 60,000 people, striking out Gehrig and DiMaggio with the bases full. Krakauskas is insulted if anybody gets a hit off him, which is a good sign.

"You can't take away from Phebus what he did against the Red Sox last fall the day he broke in with us. Gene DeSautels, a mediocre hitter, robbed Phebus of a no-hit game. He held 'em to one hit, you remember, and shut 'em out, 4-0. If these kids don't help us a lot, I'll have no more faith in my baseball judgment."

A situation that is contributing in no small measure to Harris' optimism over his pitching is the presence on the squad of Elon Hogsett, the side-winding left-hander. Hogsett threatens to provide the Nats with something they have not been blessed with in recent seasons—a capable relief pitcher.

Hogsett Relief Star.

The Nats lost dozens of games last season for lack of a chap who could stem late-inning assaults and that work for several years has been Hogsett's specialty. He was a relief star with both the Tigers and the Browns. His partner in the relief roles may be Pete Appleton, who is currently bidding for a regular starting job.

The Nats' two chief casualties, Outfielder George Case and Third Baseman Buddy Lewis, returned to uniform today. Case, suffering a sprained toe, took a mild and short workout, but Lewis showed no effects from the pulled thigh muscle he suffered yesterday.

Jimmy De Shong, Monte Weaver and Chief Hogsett will divide the pitching duties for the Nats on Wednesday, when the St. Louis Cardinals arrive here to open the exhibition game schedule. Mickey Livingston will share the catching duties with Rick Ferrell and Jimmie Wasdell will supplant Joe Kuhel at first base in the late innings.

Pitcher Dan Brainard, Catcher Al Evans and Outfielder Buck Elliott today were tabbed by Manager Harris as the prizes of the younger rookie crop. Which means that the trio will get a chance to make good with Charlotte, in the Piedmont League. Brainard was a Florida State Leaguer last season; Evans is a graduate of Joe Stripp's baseball school, and Elliott is fresh off the New York sandlots.

DICK BARTELL SIGNS.

Baton Rouge, La., March 14 (AP).—Dick Bartell, the New York Giants' star shortstop and last of the "regular" holdouts, came to terms with Manager Bill Terry today and signed his 1938 contract. Bartell, who had been demanding an increase in salary, was reported to have accepted $17,000, the same figure he received last year.

HOLDOUTS WORRY INDIANS.

New Orleans, March 14 @.—The Cleveland Indians' two holdout outfielders were a worry to Manager Oscar Vitt today.

Julius Solters, at home in Pennsylvania, and Jeff Heath, negotiating in camp, were the houdouts, but Pitcher Earl Whitehill had come into the fold.

* * * *

ZEKE BONURA DEFIANT.

New Orleans, March 14 (U.P.).—With a smile on his face but a tear in his voice, Pig Zeke Bonura, happy-go-lucky first baseman of the Chicago White Sox, broke his holdout silence today and pledged to quit baseball before he accepts the $12,500 contract offered by President Louis Comiskey.

"I don't want to knock my boss, Lou Comiskey, because I like him," said Bonura, "or my manager, Jimmy Dykes, because he's a good fellow, too. But I want to say they aren't treating me right about my contract. They only offered me a $500 raise over last year, and now they are using unfair tactics to try to make me sign.

"They threatened to fine me $100 a day for not signing and now they fixed it so I couldn't work out with the New Orleans club and get into shape. That was unsportsmanlike and I guarantee I'll stay here all summer if they don't give me more than $12,500, and they've got to come to me."

Dr. Murphy Rassles Indian On St. Patrick's Day Card

Not with malice aforethought toward Bronko Valdez, but with an eye to the box-office, did Arena officials put Dr. John (Dropkick) Murphy on the wrestling card coming up Thursday night. It happens to be St. Patrick's Day, and a proper setting for the popular Irishman to do his stuff.

DEAN DETTON.

Also with an eye to the box-office did Promoter Joe Turner include Valdez on the card, for the Mexican jumping bean is one of the most disliked matmen to show here in many moons. Hence, importing an Irishman to chastise him on St. Patrick's Day was a masterful move, especially so in view of Murphy's popularity with wrestling addicts.

Valdez has built himself up for a beautiful let-down by a series of atrocious ring tactics that all but caused a riot. The latest in a series of grappling outrages occurred last week when he made "Swede" Olsen quit after 22 minutes of some plain and fancy mayhem. The patrons look forward to Valdez's downfall with nothing short of undisguised relish.

Thursday's top bout has Dean Detton and "Chief" Chewaki as ingredients, a promising concoction. Detton at one time was champion of the circuit and a well-mannered gent who refused to stoop to the low-handed tactics practiced by so many of his brethren. But in disposing of another Indian last week, Chief Thunderbird, Detton surprised by using everything but a hacksaw. He served notice that his future conduct will be along the same lines, and this week, at least, it will be all right with the fans.

Chewaki is so unpopular here the customers have several times threatened to battle with him in their anxiety to see him defeated. The Indian wrestles with anything handy when the going gets tough, pieces of old boards, sandpaper, included, and it hasn't won him any friends. Which is as it should be in wrestling, where the plot calls for the hero to bump off the villain.

Harold (Jug) McSpaden and Byron Nelson, who shot the day's best golf, will meet Dick Metz and Ky Laffoon in the other semifinal tomorrow.

McSpaden and Nelson bagged six birdies on their last nine holes and were 15 under par for the day as they downed Denny Shute, P. G. A. champion, and Frank Moore, 2 and 1.

Horse Show Set Tonight

The last of the series of winter horse shows held in the post riding hall at Fort Myer is scheduled for 7:30 o'clock this evening.

Five classes are on the program: The student team jumping, hunter hacks, touch-and-out, open hunters and handicap jumping, as well as two exhibitions.

Maj. Roffe, manager of the show promises that one of the exhibitions will be entirely new and original, while Capt. Isaac L. Kitts will perform in the other on his famed Olympic dressage team horse, American Lady.

This show is attracting particular interest because it will decide the championship awards for the entire series. Two horses owned and ridden by officers at the post, Capt. Luebbermann's Billy Do and Lieut. Pugh's Sir Conrad, have been fighting hard for the jumper championship with first one and then the other ahead on points.

Sir Conrad now has a four-point lead on Billy Do, but anything can happen tonight and there is betting both ways. Billy Do already has the hunter championship sewed up, with 14 points to his credit— a 10-point lead over his nearest eligible competitor, Jinwich.

The student team jumping events will also determine a championship between the five schools which have sent teams, Arlington Hall, Gunston Hall, National Cathedral School, Pennsylvania Military College and Virginia Military Institute.

Among those who have made entries are: Miss Margaret Hill, F. C. Kleeman, U. S. Randle, F. J. Hughes, Mrs. N. H. McDowell, C. E. Lang, A. A. Titus, Roland Hartman and Charles Carrico.

Judging the events will be Gen. Leon B. Kromer, Chief of Cavalry; Col. Wyndam Torr, British Military Attache; Gen. Hamilton Hawkins and Dr. Fred Sanderson, joint M. F. H. of the Riding and Hunt Club.

Clarke's 157 Game Is High

Astor Clarke was in top form in a Federal League encounter at the Arcadia bowling alleys last night, pacing the F. B. I. team with a 157 game and 419 set. The Nation's No. 1 duckpin ace paced the G-Men to high team game and set of the night with 825 and 1,798.

Naval Air Station's team chalked up a new season's record in the Navy Department League on the same drives with 1,776 for the three games. They also rolled high game of 621.

C. Larimore, of the Commandants, was high among the individuals with with a 144 game, and R. Prevost, of the Hydrographics, accounted for the top set of the night with 405.

Tom Bradford tied the high set mark for the season in the Sanico League last night at Convention Hall with a 418 count. N. Terry rolled high game of 157.

Jumbo Bread paced the teams with a 1,672 set, while Corby Division cracked out high game of 577.

Record Cage Field Seen

Entries Close for Post-A.A.U. Tournament.

By Jack Munhall.

Augmented by a rush of last-minute entries, the field for the eleventh annual Post-A. A. U. basketball championships assumed record proportions last night as Washington Boys Club officials labored to tabulate deadline newcomers.

Among the entries registered on the last day were several title contenders, including the ever-formidable Federal Bureau of Investigation in the unlimited class and Roosevelt Boys Club, a surprise entry in the 145-pound class.

The latter squad was just recently organized and is composed of Roosevelt High School varsity players who finished second in the interhigh series. George West, a sharpshooting forward and an all-high choice on some teams, heads the powerful lineup.

Also on the roster are George Zuras, a stellar guard who earned honorable mention on The Post all-high aggregation; Jim Robertson, Al Miller, of this year's Roosevelt five; Al Wicklein, member of the 1936-37 Rider team; Al Katz, formerly of Central, and Charley Batchelder and Larry Brubaker.

The debut of Roosevelt Boys' Club further complicates an already unpredictable division which was left without a defending champion when Senate Beer yielded its title to invade the unlimited ranks. Roosevelt and the Washington Boys' Club Fleetwings are now co-favorites to grab the Beermen's crown.

The Fleetwings are the same team that insuccessive years annexed the 100, 115 and 130 pound titles.

Still another dark horse in the 145-pound ranks will be the Salvation Army team, coached by Sis Esenstadt, the former Georgetown University player. Salvation Army has recruited two of the better collegiate stars in "Flash" Gordon and Charley Clark, of Wilson Teachers. Clark, a former Central boy, was the city's leading scorer last season.

Opening Baseball Game Sold Out

Orlando, Fla., March 14.—A sell-out for the opening game of the 1938 season at Griffith Stadium between the Nats and the Athletics on April 18, is virtually assured today, declared Edward B. Eynon, secretary treasurer of the Washington Club. Eynon, here to observe the training activities of the Washington team, asserted that 4,000 seats were sold on March 1, when the tickets for the inaugural were placed on sale. A steady demand since has virtually exhausted the reserved seat sections.

Ten thousand bleacher and pavilion seats wil lbe placed on sale the morning of the game, said Eynon.

All-Time Peak Set by FHA in March 5 Week

Mortgages Selected for Appraisal Total $17,529,602.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

A new all-time high record for business of the Federal Housing Administration has been announced by Administrator Stewart McDonold. Replying to numerous queries regarding progress of the Housing Administration's new program which went into effect February 15, Mr. McDonald states that for the week ended March 5 new business entered on the books exceeded all previous high points.

Mortgages selected for appraisal reached a total of $17,529,602 during the week ended March 5, he said, reminding that the previous all-time high in the Housing Administration records was in the week ended March 20, 1937, when the total of mortgages selected for appraisal was $16,829,710. Figures for the week ended March 5, he explained, compared with $13,100,250 for the preceding week and $13,683,500 for the corresponding week in 1937.

| Week ended: | Amount. |
|---|---|
| January 8 | $5,483,184 |
| January 15 | 6,531,200 |
| January 22 | 7,299,975 |
| January 29 | 8,150,840 |
| February 5 | 8,571,895 |
| February 12 | 8,787,105 |
| February 19 | 10,025,800 |
| February 26 | 13,100,250 |
| March 5 | 17,529,602 |

"These figures relate chiefly to small homes," Mr. McDonald explained. "They do not include any large scale multi-family projects or property improvement loans. Our reports on those other phases of FHA activities are highly satisfactory but complete figures will not be available for a week or more."

Westinghouse Net Gains 33%

East Pittsburgh, Pa., March 14.—The Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. had one of its best years in 1937, despite widely varying business activity, declared A. W. Robertson, chairman, in the annual report to stockholders, issued here today.

Orders entered, sales billed and net income were all above 1936. The company carried into 1938 unfilled orders approximately 24 per cent greater than a year ago.

Net income was $20,126,408, compared with $15,099,291 in 1936, an increase of 33 per cent, representing earnings of $7.53 a share.

Orders received amounted to $229,540,061; an increase of 25 per cent over 1936 and second only to the record of $240,220,555 orders received for the year 1929. Sales billed, which were also slightly less than in 1929, totaled $206,348,307, an increase of 33 per cent over 1936.

International Nickel.

New York, March 14 (AP).—International Nickel Co. of Canada, Ltd., reported today a net profit of $50,299,623 for 1937, equal to $3.31 a share of common stock outstanding after dividend requirements on the preferred. This compares with $36,865,526 or $2.39 a share in 1936.

Robert C. Stanley, chairman and president of the company, said sales of nickel last year exceeded those of 1936 by 23 per cent. "While the immediate outlook is uncertain," Stanley said in his report to stockholders, "there are indications of improvement."

Inventories 21.7 Billion At End of Last Year

New York, March 14 (AP).—Inventories in manufacturing, wholesale and retail channels totaled around $21,700,000,000 at the end of 1937, it was estimated by Dun's Review today in a survey of business trends covering the last three years.

This compared with $18,839,000,000 at the end of 1936 and $16,600,000,000 at the end of 1935. The survey pointed out that the manfuacturing industries, which account for about 60 per cent of the total, not only recorded the largest dollar increases, but the greatest per cent increases of inventory in each year.

Business Need Is New Capital, Says Col. Ayres

Nation Is Suffering From Financial Anemia, He Declares.

Cleveland, Ohio, March 14.—"Financial anemia is the ailment from which American business is suffering. Anemia is a lack of blood. Financial anemia is a deficiency in the flow of new business capital. The capitalistic system requires a continuous flow of new capital, and in our case the flow has become inadequate, and business stagnation has resulted.

"There are two main sources of new business capital. One consists of the internal savings of business. These are funds companies earn and plow back into their own operations in the form of replacements, additions, and betterments of plant and equipment. A second source is new capital raised by the sale of securities. This capital comes from the external savings of others, rather than from the internal savings made by the companies themselves.

"Under exceptional conditions, as in war time or in such a period as the past five years, the flow of reinvestment funds to private savers and to corporate savers may be greatly increased by expenditures which Government may make in excess of the amounts it is taking back from the public through taxation. Such added contributions come from Government borrowing.

Taxes and Wages.

"Under present conditions the internal savings of companies are constricted because the Government has imposed heavy, progressive taxes on the undistributed earnings of corporations. The volume of earnings has been reduced through the sudden increases in wages, and the amounts retained have been cut down by the new taxes.

"The flow of new capital raised by the sale of securities has been reduced by rigorous new restrictions on the issuing of new securities. The market for new securities has been restricted by increases in the capital gains taxes and advanced surtaxes on the higher individual incomes. These restrictions have restrained capitalists from taking risks, and investors from being venturesome.

"These restraints against capital formation and capital flow had been in effect before the recent business downturn. The handicaps they imposed were largely hidden by the huge outpourings of Government borrowed funds. Now the Government has curtailed its borrowings because its revenues are supplied from higher taxes and social security income. The result is an acute business relapse caused by underinvestment."

Steel Operations Advance to 32.1%

New York, March 14 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week will advance 2.2 points to 32.1 per cent of capacity, compared with 29.9 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

A month ago operations were at the rate of 31.0 per cent of capacity, while a year ago they stood at 88.9 per cent.

The Market

Stocks Improve With Flight of Foreign Money to This Side; Austrian Bonds Break.

New York, March 14.—Financial markets were able to see a rift of light through the clouds rolling across from Europe and the tone was firmer in bonds, stocks and commodities. Dollars rose as the flight from other currencies continued, and French francs were held down on internal politics as well as on the war scare. Foreign bonds listed in this market dropped, but United States Government obligations hardened and even the harried railroad list, which lost large areas of price ground last week, recovered.

Stocks lost some of their early advance before the close, but finished with something to show on balance. Stock sales were below 500,000 shares. Wheat had a setback, May futures closing in the Chicago market 3 cents lower at 85¾ cents a bushel.

It is indeed difficult to understand even a small part of the myriad of influences which combine to influence securities prices in markets open to the world. It would appear that our stock and bond markets this week would have had far more reason for weakness than was the case a week ago. Some persons might say that last week the markets were shrinking from the threats which this week have become realities, and that the known, even if bad, is easier to face than the unknown. That line of reason will not carry far, because the calm seizure of Austria (in any event, scarcely a rape) by Germany undoubtedly is merely the beginning of a series of encroachments upon national sovereignty.

Hitler Overshadows Blum.

Perhaps the markets were less concerned over the immediate effects on foreign exchange and international trade involved in the Austrian affair than they were over the question of whether a major war would result right away. It now looks as though other large powers will continue to keep the peace, preferring apparently to make war when the odds against them are even greater than they now are. In the excitement over Germany, the return of Leon Blum to the premiership in France seemed to be a trivial incident. It was supposed that capital which might run from France because of the return of the Socialist premier would run anyhow before the prospect of German aggression.

From a speculative viewpoint, the recent turns in the world situation, and particularly in the domestic position, indicate a sporting chance for a rise in prices. France is headed for exchange control and a locking up of her remaining gold, which will make more difficult the stabilization of other exchanges. Added to that threat to the dollar's stability is the passage of further time without convincing signs of a trade pickup here. That points to heavier Government spending.

Capital Scurries to This Side.

Whatever the business outlook may be in the United States, it promises more security for capital than does any European employment for funds. Trade in Great Britain, for example, has not yet come down as far as it has here; but the recession across the Atlantic is well unwer way, and on all other counts the American dollar looks far safer than does the British pound sterling. The currencies of the smaller nations, as Holland, Switzerland and Belgium, cannot be regarded as safe so long as trade is falling and the drums are beating along the borders.

Conceivably some of the flighty foreign capital will find its way into American stocks; undoubtedly much of it will go into short-term high-grade investments and into bank balances here. In case of actual hostilities, prophecy is futile. Against the possibility of heavy orders for foreign account for our automotive, aviation, copper, nickel, steel, munitions and other industries, embargoes under the neutrality act, and above all the offset of a drastic decline in ordinary trade. A further consideration, although one of less moment at this time than it was in 1914 when the Stock Exchange had to be closed for several weeks, is the dumping of foreign investment in this country by governments seizing all assets for conversion into credits on this side and into gold.

Interest rates as measured by the average charge of banks to customers declined last month. That was to have been expected under the influence of sharp recession in commercial borrowing incident to the business depression and the pursuit of easier money by the authorities. All indications are that further softening in rates have taken place this month, and if the frantic flight of capital from Europe continues the heavy gold shipments to this side, now anticipated, will further soften interest rates. The New York City average bank rate dropped from 2.36 to 2.34 per cent. In only one period, June of last year, has so low an interest rate been seen here. The decline from 3.37 to 3.29 per cent in the average rate for other Northern and Eastern cities set a new low record also, with the exception of last August, when the same rate ruled. In Southern and Western cities the rate fell to 4.09 per cent, from 4.16 per cent, giving that part of the country the lowest interest rate yet recorded.

Austrian Bonds.

The sharpest reaction in this market to the latest German maneuver was felt in Austrian 7 per cent bonds, the issue floated under League of Nations auspices and bearing the guaranty of Great Britain, France and other European nations. After successive bids with no offers a sale finally was arranged at 36⅛, part of the bonds sold being for foreign account. The price was 37⅞ points under the last sale which took place Friday. The market assumed, and rightly no doubt, that the guaranty was of no value. It was a corollary to the guaranty of Austrian independence and sovereignty that went with the loan in the first place. Default on Austrian independence, so far as the rest of Europe was concerned, took place when German troops seized the country last week, and consequently default on the pledge under the bonds was a matter of course. Left alone Austria will do what Germany wishes, and Germany does not wish to pay her own debts, let alone those of recently acquired territory.

Alleghany.

Alleghany directors may not authorize the expenditure of additional cash deposited behind the 5 per cent bonds of 1950 for buying more bonds for cancellation for several weeks. The imminence of the dissolution of Chesapeake Corporation is believed to be the reason for the change in plans for lifting the technical default in this issue. It is rumored that Alleghany Corporation shortly may begin to take an active interest in the Missouri Pacific situation.

Hitler's Coup Cracks Europe's Currencies

New York, March 14 (AP).—Leading European currencies cracked in a wholesale rout today following Germany's absorption of Austria. The British pound dropped a cent in terms of the dollar to the lowest level this year. French francs, off .16 of a cent, fell to a 11-year low. Dealings in Austrian schillings came to a full stop, because no one in foreign exchange circles could guess at their value. German marks sank .04 of a cent and The Netherlands guilder sagged .11 of a cent, the Swiss franc .04 of a cent, and the belga .02 of a cent.

Wheat Topples With Subsiding Of War Fears

Chicago Declines Follow Sharp Downturns in Overseas Markets.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 14.—In selling rushes on the part of traders who had been eager buyers because of war-scare reports, Chicago wheat values collapsed 3 cents today.

Sharp downturns of wheat values overseas despite recent tense political developments preceded today's market tumbles here to fresh low-price records for the season. The outstanding reason given for selling in Chicago was widespread belief expressed that immediate war dangers had been dissipated.

At the close Chicago wheat futures were 2⅛-3 cents under Saturday's finish, May, 85¾@85⅞; July, 82¼@82½; Corn, 1 cent to 1⅛ down; May, 57⅛@57¾; July, 59½; oats, ⅜@½ off; rye showing 2¼@2⅞ drop, and provisions 2 cents to 15 cents setback.

6 Metals Declining For 9 to 18 Years

New York, March 14.—Although current discussions of the Nation's price structure imply that only agricultural commodities are in the so-called flexible price group, a study of the six metals most widely used in construction and industry reveals a steadily downward price trend for the last 9 to 18 years.

Prices of three of these six vitally important metals reached post-war peaks in 1920; namely, aluminum at 32.21 cents a pound, iron at $47.83 a ton, and zinc at 9.22 cents a pound. Lead followed in 1925 at 9.72 cents a pound, tin in 1926 at 70.70 cents per pound, and copper in 1929 at 21.26 cents a pound.

None of the group has ever regained those peaks in subsequent years. What is probably more significant in the light of present-day political thought is the fact that only two—zinc and tin — approached within 80 per cent of their 1920-29 high during the latest bull commodity market a year ago.

Failures Increase.

New York, March 14 (AP).—Business failures in the United States for the week ended March 13 totaled 269, compared with 242 a week earlier and 170 for the comparable 1937 period, Dun & Bradstreet reported today. Part of the gain was accounted for by a two-week report from Los Angeles, where listings in the preceding week were delayed by flood conditions.

lowed with discussions led mostly by bankers in that territory, who will speak from the standpoint of experience in this area.

A feature of the conference will be a public meeting for bank customers to be held at the close of the conference Friday evening, March 18, to which the customers of banks will be invited. This forum will be addressed by Mr. Thorpe, a nationally known editor.

Bank Campaign.

Close recently of the second week of the co-operative newspaper advertising campaign of the District of Columbia Bankers Association to promote loans for residential repair, alteration and modernization under title 1 of the amended national housing act, reveals a substantial growth of prospective borrowers in need of funds for the foregoing purposes.

The objective of the campaign is to realize the largest possible immediate increase of employment in Washington. There has been a great deal of renovizing work taking place in the Capital throughout the winter but with the approach of spring the bankers' association expects a further gain in this activity.

Besides the number of applications for loans for this work already presented, representatives of the association have become aware of the fact that a great many prospective home modernizers are now securing estimates on the cost of projected repair work before making applications for renovizing loans from banking institutions.

Executive Vice President and Cashier Thomas J. Groom, of the Bank of Commerce & Savings, who is president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, sees the results of the publicity effort as highly encouraging during the brief period the movement has been under way.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 14—With the exception of transatlantic issues which made sizable gains, the stock market was quiet and weak today. Selling from foreign sources was the principal depressing influence. Kaffirs were particularly reactionary due to continental sales. Internationals as a whole were steady. Foreign bonds were nominally lower.

Paris—The bourse had a generally heavy tone today although demand for international issues improved. Government bonds were irregular. Bank of France lost 340 points and Suez Canal was down 1,225.

Liverpool—Wheat futures reacted 2½ to 2¾d under heavy liquidation today. Traders noted reports of beneficial rains in the United States and weakness of Buenos Aires and North American markets. Cotton advanced in sympathy with firmness of overseas markets. Contracts were scarce. The gain more than offset Saturday's losses and final prices were 13 to 14 points net higher.

Bob Burns Says—

I was jest reading where some big scientist said that part of the damage caused by floods is compensated by the knowledge we gain.

Durin' this recent flood out here, one little town in the valley was isolated. An old native rigged up a ferryboat and charged people 10 cents to get across to the main land.

An actor came running down to the old man and says "I've got to get over to Hollywood and I've only got a nickel." The old man says "well, if you ain't got but a nickel, you won't be any better off in Hollywood than you are over here."

Are Americans in Favor of Trade Agreements?

In a survey among British voters, 94 per cent favored a trade treaty with the U. S. But do U. S. voters approve of Secretary Hull's policy in seeking a reciprocal trade agreement with Great Britain? The Gallup Poll made a survey among Democrats and Republicans to learn how the two parties reacted to the trade agreements. The result will be published in tomorrow's Post.
